RESOLUTION No. 2517EDN.

Calcutta, the 27th July 1935.

Minister in charge : The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur M. Azizul Haque.

INTRODUCTION.—Exactly a hundred years ago, the famous Resolution of the Government of India gave a new direction and a strong impetus to education in India. Since then the growth of education in Bengal has been rapid. The growing demand of the people of Bengal for educational facilities has been one of the most impressive features of our age. Schools and colleges arose in all parts of the province. The range of studies became gradually wider and wider and teaching more extensive. The University of Calcutta was established to co-ordinate higher education and later developed to foster research. Under the present system a large educated community has grown up, which has supplied the province for generations, in increasing measure, with the personnel for its administration, its learned and humble professions, its business and industry and its social and political leadership, and the province can legitimately take pride in what has been achieved in the field of education.

This process of expansion is still going on. "Education has come to be regarded generally as a matter of primary national importance, an indispensable agency in the task of nation-building." Communities, which in the early days of English education, were slow to respond, are now fully awakened to the need and possibilities of education for their children. The demand for more institutions for the education of girls has been insistent all through the province for some time past. The movement has spread to backward classes—the depressed classes, the scheduled castes and even to the aboriginal tribes. All now demand education as a right.

But with all this, as time passed, it became manifest to thoughtful observers that the present educational system was tending to become stereotyped and mechanical and was not meeting in full the changing needs and requirements of the province. A great mass of the intelligent manhood of the province is at present driven in ever increasing numbers along the same, often unfruitful, course of study, which creates expectations that cannot be fulfilled and sometimes actually unfits those who pursue it from undertaking many useful occupations, necessary for the welfare and well-being of the province.

Attempts have been made in the past to remedy this state of affairs and to improve the system of education in the province. Public men and educationists, the Universities and the authorities of schools, have done much to adapt education to the new requirements of the times. There has been a great awakening to the need of improvement both in the quality of education provided and in the conditions which determine the working of educational institutions, but, in spite of the rapid expansion of education and attempts for a better type, we are still far behind and have a long way to make up, if Bengal is to take her proper place in the future history of India.

A hundred years have passed since Lord William Bentinck's Resolution on education. We stand to-day on the threshold of a new era. In a short time Bengal will be an autonomous province and its destinies will be very largely in the hands of its own people. "To educate our masters" will be more than ever a duty and a responsibility. For the last few years public opinion has shown genuine anxiety about the future of education. The time is ripe, therefore, for a review of the whole position, especially of primary education, in which Bengal lags most behind, and there is more than ever to-day an imperative necessity to face the problems of education, estimate their magnitude and devise practical measures for their gradual solution. Bad education is as detrimental to the welfare of the community as want of education and forms a great menace to good Government, however it may be constituted, whether it be bureaucratic or popular. Expansion of education is still certainly the need of the province, but, if it follows unhealthy and unprofitable channels, the flood may devastate instead of fertilising the country. The problem is complex enough and the longer it is postponed the more difficult it will be, as its solution vitally concerns the future social, political and economic welfare of the province.

The following resolution is, therefore, an attempt to reorganise the present system and conditions of education, and particularly primary education, and the Government in the Ministry of Education are genuinely anxious that something should be done to better the conditions of education and so to train up the future generations that every Bengali child may reach, according to his aptitude and irrespective of his parents' position, the full measure of intellectual and moral achievement and that the young man of Bengal, who wishes to go in for higher education, may not at the end of his career find himself in a morass of disappointment but may be better equipped for the increasing struggle of life.

1. Defects of the Educational System.—

The condition of education in Bengal has for many years caused anxiety to thoughtful observers and it has often been pointed out that the province is gradually losing the position of pre-eminence it once occupied in education. In 1917 the Calcutta University Commission was appointed to investigate the state of higher education in the Colleges and University and it presented a thorough and detailed Report with a carefully considered scheme of recommendations for reform. Very few of its proposals have, however, been carried out. The Auxiliary Committee on Education to the Statutory Commission (Hartog Committee) again surveyed the position of education in this province, as in the other provinces, and exposed many defects, especially in the system of elementary education. The Bengal and Indian Quinquennial Reports on Education also contain candid criticisms of many aspects of education in the province. Speeches in the Legislative Council, articles in the newspapers and the utterances of many prominent leaders provide further proof that there is much that is ill-designed, inefficient and wasteful in education in Bengal.

These criticisms are not of recent times. Ever since the reconstitution of the Presidency of Bengal in 1912, educationists have realised the dangers of the situation, but the war of 1914-18 made any educational reorganisation impossible.

The new reforms were inaugurated in 1921 and Bengal, as a result of the Meston Award, has been in great financial difficulties and this in spite of retrenchment and additional taxation. The result has been that expenditure on education in Bengal has practically remained stationary, being Rs. 1,23,16,000 in 1922-23 and Rs. 1,27,67,000 in 1933-34. Primary education has particularly suffered from this inability to expand and education in general has suffered in comparison with other provinces, as will appear from the following figures:—

Province.	Population.	Revenue receipts.		Total expenditure on education.		Expenditure on primary education.
		1921-22.	1933-34.	1921-22.	1933-34.	1922-23.	1933-34.

2. Thrown into relief by (1) Retrenchment.—The result for education has been disastrous. What was bad has become worse and what was tolerable has in many instances become bad. Successive years of world-wide economic distress and the general fall in prices, and especially in jute, aggravated the situation. The Retrenchment Committees recommended many economies in educational expenditure and, although all their proposals were not accepted, those which were accepted owing to the exigencies of finance inevitably retarded progress. Improvements, long meditated and long overdue, had to be postponed indefinitely and, instead of even normal progress, there was at many points a visible retrogression. The grant given by Government to institutions had to be curtailed at the very time when their other sources of income had diminished or disappeared.

(2) Economic Depression and Unemployment.

—The economic difficulties and rigours of these days have thus thrown into bold relief the weaknesses of the educational system in Bengal. But other causes also have combined to reveal them more clearly and to focus public attention on them. The growing extent of unemployment among certain classes, intensified by the general depression of trade and industry, has produced a storm of criticism directed against a system of education, which did not fit the youth of the province to earn their own living, criticism which was perfectly natural even if not altogether justified. The Vice-Chancellor of the University of Dacca said in evidence before the Unemployment Inquiry Committee, "I regard the education given now in the majority of cases.....in Bengal as tending to diminish the intellectual energy of those who receive it. It is sterilising. I think the education at present imparted is in many cases a positive disadvantage to those who receive it and tends to render the students more worthless in the market than if they had worked by themselves."

(3) Terrorism.—The outlook of Bhadralog youths in Bengal to-day is one of gloom and despair and it has thereby predisposed their minds to the morbid attitude, which allowed revolutionary and terrorist leaders to find ready disciples in many of the schools and colleges. The terrorist movement in Bengal, which assumed menacing proportions in recent years, revealed some of the weaknesses of the present educational system.

But the financial stringency, the growth of unemployment and of subversive political movements are not themselves the cause of, although in many ways they have intensified, the defects of education in Bengal. Those defects are of long standing and have only been made prominent—more difficult to solve—by recent events. The primary causes should be sought rather in the general social and political history of the province. A complete analysis of them would be out of place here, but attention may be drawn to one or two of the more singular features.

3. Peculiar features of Educational system:

(1) Its urban bias.—The great majority of Bengal's population is engaged in agriculture. The greater part of the province consists of the vast deltas of the Ganges and Brahmaputra, land admirably suited for agriculture but destitute of mineral resources. It possesses also important industries but these are located almost entirely in two relatively small areas, Calcutta and its neighbourhood and the coal-field area in the Burdwan district. Speaking generally, Bengalis have stood aloof from the development of these industries and the labour force is very largely drawn from outside Bengal. As is natural in an agricultural land, the people live for the most part in villages and the towns are small country towns, rural rather than distinctively urban in character. Apart from Dacca, Calcutta and Howrah, which is practically a part of Calcutta, there is not a town in the province with a population of 100,000 and very few with 50,000 inhabitants. Nor is the urban population increasing relatively, except in Calcutta and its neighbourhood. Excluding Calcutta and Howrah, 38 per thousand of the population lived in towns in 1911; in 1931, the proportion had fallen to 34 per thousand.

In spite of this predominantly rural and agricultural character of the province, the system of education is better adapted to an urban than to a rural population. The subjects taught are those helpful to the boy who has to live and earn a living in a town rather than to the boy who will be a farmer or cultivator. This is true even of the lowest stages, which have been designed to lead up to what is often summarised as "an English education." In other words, boys have sought and been given not so much a training for life as the specific kind of training, which would qualify them for a clerkship or at best for one of a limited number of professions. The middle vernacular schools, in which boys might obtain a good general grounding, have never been popular in Bengal and are now almost extinct and even the primary schools teach English. This is an extraordinary paradox.

(2) Preponderance of Private Schools.—

Another paradox is to be found in the fact that the early and rapid spread of English education in the province is one of the chief causes of its general inefficiency at present. A hundred years ago, when the first public schools and colleges were established in Bengal, they proved so popular, largely as a pathway to official preferment, that similar institutions were founded by private persons in large numbers all over the province. As the pupils were willing to pay for their instruction, such private schools not only diffused learning, but provided occupation and profit. In other words, schools became a remunerative business and it is not surprising that they sprang up on every side. Many other motives of a higher kind undoubtedly contributed in great measure to the multiplication of schools; but in any case the result was that far more schools in Bengal owed their origin to private enterprise than to public foundation and, as a corollary, the condition of many of them was ephemeral and precarious, resting neither on a substantial endowment nor on the resources of the State or of public bodies. Thus, in Bengal, we have the peculiar and characteristic feature of a predominantly "private" system of schools under no adequate public control.

4. Defects (1) of Primary Schools.—But, whatever the historic causes may be and whatever the aggravating circumstances of the present, the condition of education in Bengal is such as to compel the anxious consideration of Government and of all interested in the welfare of the province. The primary schools are numerous indeed; but in almost every other respect they are deficient. The great majority of the pupils are in the lowest class and go no higher—nine out of ten of them never become really literate and derive little if any benefit from their year or two of schooling. The curriculum is not altogether adapted to the rural environment from which the children come and to which they return. The teacher is often untrained and generally unenthusiastic, and, even when he has both energy and skill, is faced with impossible problems—the problem of teaching three classes single-handed, the problem of how to live on six or eight rupees a month, the problem of engaging and maintaining the attention of pupils who and whose parents are more or less indifferent to education, the problem of sustaining his keenness when he is isolated from year's end to year's end except for the single visit of the inspector. At their best the primary school and its staff may be the centre of village life and the chief motive power of rural progress—but the least that they should do is to make the pupils literate: it is, however, the belief of those qualified to judge that the ordinary primary school in Bengal does not adequately perform even this elementary and fundamental task. The aid which Government have been able to give to primary schools has been disproportionately small; and the levy of the cess provided in the Primary Education Act of 1930 has had to be postponed on account of general economic depression.

(2) Of Secondary Schools.—The secondary schools are little better adapted to their function. The complaint has been general that they have devoted themselves to the single task of passing pupils through the Matriculation and that the interests of those who never proceed to a college course are betrayed. Nor was the course of studies for the Matriculation satisfactory, even as a general preparation for higher studies. The school tended to neglect all the other important aspects of education, the training of the body and of character; and the nature of the teaching was such as to stimulate the use of the memory rather than of the mind.

(3) Financial Instability.—Even this limited and too narrowly academic task the schools were in many instances ill-fitted to discharge because of the inadequacy of their staff, equipment and financial resources. The rapid growth in the number of schools has led, especially in towns and developed areas, to competition for pupils, with the result that the average number of pupils in a school is uneconomically small. There are on the average less than 250 pupils in a high school and the income from fees is only a little over Rs. 500 a month: but in many schools the number of pupils and the fee income are actually much less. In the last Quinquennial Report it was pointed out that Bengal is much worse off than Madras or Bombay in these respects. The consequence is that many schools are unable to entertain a sufficient number of teachers or to pay them properly or even regularly, the teaching is inefficient and both teachers and pupils are driven to private tuition to eke out the deficiencies of the school. There is nothing more ominous and significant in the educational system than the almost universal prevalence of private tuition.

(4) Lack of extra-academic activities.—

It is not surprising that in such institutions the school does not supply the facilities, and the teachers have neither the time nor the enthusiasm, for the stimulation and supervision of the activities of the pupils outside the class room. Few healthy outlets are provided for their occupation or amusement. There is often little attempt at organised games or physical recreation, apart from the dull routine of drill, little attempt at any regular measurement and record of physical progress or the detection, diagnosis and treatment of physical weakness. Many of the boys have no interests or hobbies and perhaps the teachers have none either. The actual teaching, too, is imparted generally by men, who have perhaps in many cases no special gifts or talents of their own, little devotion or loyalty to the school, no scientific training, and who are preoccupied with the necessity of adding in some way to their meagre salaries; and teaching under such conditions can scarcely be expected to arouse the interest, touch the imagination or develop the intellectual curiosity of the pupils. Most of the faculties of the mind lie numbed and inert in this wintry scholasticism.

It is with such material that the colleges have to deal—plants already so mishandled and stunted as to need the most favourable influences to bring to flower and fruit, individual attention, sympathetic care, the fostering of mental and spiritual light and warmth. The task would be difficult enough in any event, but our colleges can scarcely be said to offer this exceptional environment. Another series of examinations are again held out as the goal of intellectual endeavour. Many of the colleges are too large to permit of effective personal guidance or tutorial help. Many of those in Calcutta especially have no adequate playing fields. Few of them are able to create any corporate tradition or attract any deep sense of loyalty. A school or a college means little more to a boy than the shop to which he gives his custom or the train which takes him on a journey.

This picture may seem to be painted in colours too sombre to be true, but it is intended to be only an impressionistic sketch of the effect produced by the existing educational system on those who are aware of the progress made not only in other countries but in other provinces of India and who cannot regard the stagnation in Bengal with equanimity. Among the chief weaknesses are these. First, the lack of funds has not only hampered development but led to actual retrenchment and retreat at some points. Education is an expensive commodity and some of those who take a narrow view, who fail to realise how fundamental it is to national health and progress, are inclined to regard it as a luxury.

(5) Superfluity of Schools.—But, secondly, the unnecessarily great number of educational institutions in some overschooled areas of Bengal, far greater in proportion than those in any other province, has become a source of danger and inefficiency, depriving schools of that necessary financial stability without which efficiency is impossible.

(6) Lack of variety.—In the third place, all the schools have been cast in the same mould and directed to the same end, so that individual aptitudes and gifts have often been crushed out and the potential soldier, explorer, saint, business man, inventor, farmer or artisan have generally been transformed into potential clerks. Again, the scheme of studies has not only been uniform but unsuited to the background, tradition and needs of the majority of the pupils—and in a country, where 14 out of 15 persons live in villages and three out of four of those who work for a living are employed in agriculture, we have a curriculum intended mainly for town-dwellers and workers.

(7) Inadequate Control.—Over this enormous mass of institutions, there is no well-organised control: many of them are private schools and many receive no grant from public funds and escape even that measure of supervision which the receipt of a grant entails. Over the high schools there has been a divided control, which has long proved unsatisfactory and detrimental to any thorough reorganisation of secondary education. The inspecting staff of the Department has been and is quite insufficient to carry out any effective inspection, which should imply guidance and inspiration as well as supervision.

(8) The Teaching Staff.—Again, the schools left largely to their own devices have been staffed by teachers who are often neither numerous enough nor sufficiently qualified, trained or well paid nor so imbued with a sense of vocation as to be equal to the high responsibilities of their task. They generally content themselves with the minimum, uninspiring instruction in the class room, neglecting all the possibilities of influencing the character of their pupils for good or of training them to be healthy, happy, useful citizens. And the pupils so trained, or rather untrained, have in not a few cases been drawn into the toils of revolutionary conspiracy and done inestimable harm to themselves and to the entire political development of their country, for which they cherish such a disastrously misdirected love.

5. Multiplication of Lower Primary Schools.—The spread of literacy in Bengal has been surprisingly slow and in the last ten or twelve years it is doubtful if it has spread at all. The explanation is to be found in the fact that the overwhelming proportion of primary schools are lower primary schools with only three classes, that most of these schools have only a single teacher each and that the great majority of the pupils never proceed beyond the infant class. Three years of schooling under such conditions is not sufficient to make a pupil permanently literate. But new schools of this type are arising every day. During the five years from 1927 to 1932, the number of boys' primary schools decreased in three provinces and the largest increases were about 900 in Assam and 800 in Bombay; but in Bengal there was an increase of over 5,500, far more than the new schools in all the other provinces put together. This fact is sufficient indication of the ill-considered manner in which primary education in Bengal is proceeding. On the other hand, little was done to effect any real improvement in the quality of the teaching. The Indian Quinquennial Report for 1927-32 contrasts the position in Bengal with that of the North-Western Frontier Province, where the people live widely scattered and where the difficulties are perhaps as great, though not of the same kind, as those of Bengal. "Whereas there are in Bengal an unknown number of lower primary three-class schools (the Hartog Committee estimated the number at 39,000 in 1927), there are none in the Frontier Province. Whereas there are only 54 vernacular middle schools in Bengal, there are already 199 such schools (inclusive of lower middle schools) in the Frontier Province. Whereas the average enrolment of a primary school in Bengal is 38.4, that in the Frontier Province is 51.4, in spite of the fact that most of the well attended primary schools have been converted into middle schools and have thereby been removed from calculation. Whereas the percentage of boys in Bengal in Class I who reach Class IV in the normal period of time was only 13 in 1932, that in the Frontier Province rose from 12 to 18 during the quinquennium." The Bengal Quinquennial Report also concluded that "an improvement in quality rather than in quantity is the first requisite of an effective system of primary education in Bengal."

6. Programme of reconstruction.—With this state of things neither Government nor the discerning public can any longer be content. It would be useless to apportion blame, when many of the causes lie far in the past or in circumstances beyond the control of any individual or even the province as a whole. But, on the other hand, it would be fatal to adopt the attitude either of complacency or of despair. Government are conscious that the complexity of the problems and the magnitude of the difficulties have often in the past induced a policy of drift; and that no piecemeal reorganisation, no changes of detail, will avail to remedy weaknesses and defects which are so far-reaching. They propose, accordingly, a comprehensive programme of reconstruction, a programme which cannot immediately be carried into entire effect but which will be steadily pursued till its objects are achieved. In other words, they propose a plan of reconstruction for education which they intend to follow in future years. Important parts of the plan will have to wait for more prosperous times but the great advantage will be that schemes will be ready to be put into operation as soon as funds are available.

7. Proposal for four-class Primary Schools.—Government accordingly believe that the time has come to plan for primary schools of a higher standard. At present, the full primary course extends over five years but the upper primary schools are comparatively few. A five years' primary course would be most desirable, but the cost of providing and staffing a large number of such schools throughout the province would be prohibitive. It is accordingly proposed that the distinction between Upper and Lower Primary schools should be done away with and that the primary course should last for four years, Classes I—IV.

8. Staff.—Each primary school, as organised in this scheme, would also be expected to maintain a staff of four teachers as a condition of receiving recognition or aid. In special circumstances it may be necessary and desirable to start a school with a smaller number of classes, but the number of teachers must always be the same as the number of classes. Only thus can the instruction be made satisfactory and the increased help which Government hope to be in a position to give will make this possible. Provision will also be made to train more primary school teachers, for at present the proportion in Bengal is the lowest in all India. There were 73.3 per cent. of trained teachers in the Punjab, 59.4 in Madras and only 28.1 in Bengal in 1932.

9. Free instruction.—The ultimate aim is that instruction in all primary schools shall be free, at least for those who are too poor to pay any fees at all. This will involve the loss of a few lakhs of rupees in fees but will throw elementary education open to even the poorest.

10. The question of compulsion.—It is not proposed, however, to make it compulsory at this stage and that for three reasons. In the first place, the cost of a free compulsory scheme would be entirely beyond the financial resources of the province now, and, until the Primary Education Act is given effect to, nothing in the way of compulsion can be achieved, except perhaps in a few selected areas. Estimates of the cost of compulsory education differ, but the lowest is about Rs. 3½ crores, about five times the total amount now spent on primary education from public and private sources. In the second place, compulsion, where it has been tried in India, has not yet proved an unqualified success in rural areas; in municipalities, of course, the problem of ensuring attendance is far simpler than in rural areas. In the third place, a well-designed net-work of four class primary schools will provide the opportunity for education to a very large proportion of children of school-going age and, without compulsion and the machinery and unpopularity it entails, practically the same result may be achieved. The last Indian Quinquennial Report points out that "unless a system of compulsion is based on firm foundations, unless the majority of parents are actively in support, unless an ample supply of trained and efficient teachers is available, unless there is careful supervision and a wise distribution of schools, compulsion will do more harm than good."

11. Compulsion to continue at school.—But there is another type of compulsion, which is absolutely necessary to prevent the wastage which has so often been exposed and deplored. In 1932 there were about 1,344,000 children in the lowest class and only about 100,000 in the highest primary class. In other words, a great majority of the children did not stay in school long enough to become literate. On the average, a primary school in Bengal consists of 22 children in the lowest class, 7 in the second class and 5 in the third. The crowd in the infant class is alone what enables the school to carry on, what in fact gives it the semblance of a school. The ordinary primary school now is not even a lower primary school of three classes, it is practically a school with only one class, the infant.

While, therefore, Government do not believe that it would be wise at this time to compel all children to come to school, they recognise that steps should be taken to prevent this wastage. They desire that every child, whose parents send it to school, should be given the opportunity to learn to read and write and they propose that, once a child joins school, it should be compelled to remain at school till it has finished a primary course or for five years—and, as a corollary to this, that no child should be allowed to remain in the same class for more than two years. Compulsion to continue in school will give the children and the teachers a real opportunity to teach and to learn. It is not an unreasonable assumption that a parent, who sends his boy to school, wishes him to become literate; and he cannot very well complain if measures are taken to realise this end. The first step is the parent's own; but he will take it in the full knowledge of the consequences which it entails.

12. Curriculum: Rural bias.—Another important matter remains—the curriculum of primary schools. It has already been pointed out that in a mainly rural and agricultural province like Bengal the course of study in the primary school should be adapted to the needs and environment of the majority of the children. At present the curriculum is designed not to be complete in itself but to lead up to higher studies; and, in fact, two out of three children who come to the end of the primary course pass on to the middle school. The natural result is that, while the country as a whole depends on its villages and on agriculture, every intelligent boy is drawn away to the towns and to occupations which can only be followed in towns; the countryside is regularly drained of its most hopeful and intelligent elements. And, on the other hand, no villages need instructed leadership and service more desperately than the villages of Bengal, afflicted by malaria and other diseases, oppressed by the growing burden of debt. Under the new system here proposed, the number of children in the upper classes of the primary schools will probably be very much greater and there will be all the more need for a re-orientation of the curriculum. This revision is necessary, first because the existing course is generally regarded as too heavy and wide for the average village boy, secondly because the primary course should be a self-contained course suited to the village child, lastly because the child will be able to grasp more quickly and intelligently teaching with a "rural bias," dealing with ideas and things which are part of its own background.

Primary education will thus mean for the village boy not only a grounding in the rudiments of general knowledge, but also in some sense a preparation for his own vocation. A curriculum on these lines for primary schools is being prepared.

13. Programme of Primary Schools.—

There are at present over 60,000 primary schools in Bengal, mostly one or two-class schools, mostly one-teacher and only a small number two-teacher schools. These 60,000 probably do not produce 60,000 literates in the year. It is obvious that any scheme of re-organisation may involve, until more funds are available, a reduction in the number of schools receiving aid from Government and public funds without in any way reducing the sum total of grants. This may be inevitable, because funds are not available to render all of them even moderately efficient. In many villages there is a general patshala, a maktab for Moslem boys and a school for girls—none of them properly housed, equipped, staffed or taught, useless for any purpose of good. Some amalgamation and selection is an indispensable preliminary to effective reconstruction. It should always be remembered that many of the present schools teach so little and so badly that their abolition is no real loss to anyone. Government propose, however, not to abolish but to expand facilities for education and, as a preliminary, desire that a survey should be undertaken of the location and standard of the existing schools and that the number should be reduced to about 16,000 and that for the time being a programme involving this number of good primary schools, fairly distributed throughout the province, should be carefully worked out. If they were properly distributed, there would still be in general a school within less than two miles of every child. The provision would thus not be very inadequate considering the present financial condition of the province, and, when more money is available, more schools could be established. Sixteen thousand are all that are now possible with any regard for efficiency.

14. Probable increase in number of literate pupils.

In 1932, there were about 21 lakhs of children in all the primary schools, of whom only about 8 lakhs were above the infant class. The schools under the proposed scheme, situated as they will be in the larger villages and within easy reach of the smaller villages, will be able to have on the average a much higher enrolment, especially as wastage will be prevented and children will move on regularly from class to class. Most of them will probably easily obtain an enrolment of 120 pupils, 30 in each class. The 16,000 schools will thus have over 19 lakhs of pupils, of whom about 14 lakhs will be in the three upper classes against the present actual number of 864,659 pupils in the top four classes of the primary stage. The total number of children at school will thus not be very much smaller, especially because the primary stages of middle and high schools in rural areas will also absorb a considerable number of pupils, but the number made literate will be out of all proportion greater. The opportunities for real education will expand rather than contract as a result of this reorganisation.

15. Maktabs and Girls' Schools.—Of the 43,000 or more boys' schools which we have now, about 16,000 are maktabs and about 27,000 are general schools. Of the 18,000 girls' schools, about half are maktabs. But it is proposed that under the new scheme all classes of children should attend the same type of schools, provision being made in the curriculum for especial Islamic subjects.

To take first the case of Maktabs: the curriculum in these schools is practically identical with that in a general primary school except that provision is made for religious instruction and the teaching of Islamic subjects. There is no reason why instead of two, one single school, so organised as to provide for the necessary variation in school studies, should not, in all but the most exceptional circumstances, satisfy the needs of both the Hindu and the Moslem communities in primary education. Similar arguments apply to primary schools existing entirely for the education of girls. A school which is to teach girls must provide instruction in subjects which find no place in a boy's curriculum, but this can be done as well in a large general institution generously housed and staffed as in a small and inefficient school to which only girls may go.

Government regard it as a paramount duty to do all that is possible to forward the education of girls and they believe that a great step in this direction will have been taken when the distinction between boys' and girls' primary schools goes.

The positive advantages of such fusion and condensation of schools, even apart from any considerations of efficiency and economy, are great. Every primary school will, under these conditions, have on its staff both Hindu and Moslem, men and women, teachers and will be able to provide, with increased efficiency, all the advantages which accrued to the special and separate institutions.

In schools where a majority of the pupils are Moslem the title of Maktab, traditionally attached to Islamic primary schools, might be given, while in the bigger centres of population, where some of the foregoing arguments have less force, it may be found of advantage to have separate schools for girls and for Moslem pupils.

16. An outline of distribution.—The Presidency of Bengal occupies 77,521 square miles, roughly one-fifth of which may be deducted for waste lands, hill tracts, jungle, rivers and beel areas. If 16,000 schools were properly distributed, there would still be in general a school within less than two miles of every child. Bengal has a total population of about 50 millions, of which a little over 46 millions live in rural areas. There would thus be at least one efficient primary school to serve the need of a rural population of a little less than 3,000. In effect, it will mean that in districts like Hooghly, Howrah, Dacca, Mymensingh, Faridpur, Bakarganj, Tippera and Noakhali there will be a primary school to almost every 2 to 3 square miles or a school within less than a mile of every child in these districts. In some districts, the situation of the school will depend upon the existence of beels, rivers, forests, hills and these factors may necessitate local adjustments. But, subject to this, the following distribution of primary schools is suggested, on the basis of one primary school per 3,000 of population:—

The table will make it clear that in all except 6 districts the area to be served by each school will be near about or even less than 5·5 square miles, which means that, if the area served is taken as a circle, then the schools will be within 1½ mile distance of every boy or girl. The six districts where each school area is over six square miles are Bankura, Midnapur, 24-Parganas, Khulna, Dinajpur, and Jalpaiguri. All these areas have forests and jungles, hill tracts and uninhabited areas; if these are excluded, the school area in these districts also will probably come to the level of the other districts.

The Government wish to make it clear that in putting forth these proposals before the public, they are genuinely anxious to expand the opportunities of real education and to bring in a better condition of instruction. Nor do they wish by these proposals to delay the operation of the Primary Education Act, should the economic condition of the people justify the introduction of the Act at any particular time. On the other hand, the establishment of the new type primary schools will give an immediate programme of work to those districts which have accepted the partial operation of the Primary Education Act. When the Act is introduced in full, these schools working in double shifts will meet the needs of the rural areas as contemplated under the Primary Education Act and in many respects will be the models, so that the people may get good value for their money, and the dangers of wastage, of lapse into illiteracy and of bad education may be avoided.

17. Employment of 64,000 teachers.—Under this scheme, 64,000 men and women teachers will be settled in village life with a new avenue of employment. Sixteen thousand of them, as will be seen later, will be employed on a pay of Rs. 20 and 48,000 on a pay of Rs. 15. They will, in addition, have opportunities to look after their village lands and cultivation. One may fairly aim at creating a new life in the villages and incidentally these men and women will be directly interested in the improvement of village agriculture and will be better informed about market conditions.

18. The Primary School Teacher.—In education, even more than in other social activities, everything depends in the last resort on the human factor and the teacher is the key to the success or failure of an institution. All earlier proposals are intended merely to remove obstacles and to provide a favourable environment for the efforts of the teacher; and they would by themselves be futile unless the quality of the teaching is sound. But in Bengal the teacher is not only overworked and underpaid, but generally untrained and ill-qualified for his work. The last Quinquennial Report stated that "most of the teachers remain untrained. Bengal, in this respect also, was at the bottom of the list of provinces. Of the untrained teachers there are, it is reported, many who cannot even read correctly or with ease.....The fact is that the conditions of service of the primary school teacher are such that the profession can scarcely attract any but those who are driven into it in despair as the last refuge of the unemployed.....the average salary in Bengal is the lowest in all India."

19. Need for Rural-minded Teachers.—Nor is this all. Many of the teachers are men with an urban rather than a rural outlook, with a smattering of an "English education," who belong by upbringing or long-ing to the towns rather than to the country. A new type of teacher is required, men and women who have had a thorough vernacular education, who have been trained in the art of teaching small children, who are interested in the welfare of the village and eager to play their part in its improvement. The Auxiliary Committee wrote thus:—"There is little hope of real progress in primary education, unless a definite break is made with the policy of inconsiderately multiplying schools, and of hastily expanding or improvising new ineffective arrangements for training the additional teachers required. As matters stand in India, effective arrangements for training vernacular teachers must, generally speaking, precede the expansion of primary schools, as the training of vernacular teachers itself depends upon a good supply of recruits from middle vernacular schools. Hence money spent on expansion or improvement of middle vernacular schools and on vernacular training institutions will yield a larger and more permanently fruitful return than money spent on almost any other of the many objects which are dear to the heart of the educationist."

The last Indian Quinquennial Report quoted from the report of a committee of American experts about missionary educational work in India to the same effect. "We would get further in the end," they suggested, "if we closed one half of our village schools and spent money in training teachers for the other half.....What we need for village teachers are not foreigners, nor even the urban, English-trained Indians of the city schools. The one has never had, and the other has lost, the ability to think along the furrows cut by Indian tradition. The need is for young men and women who, having grown up in a village, are used to its ways of living; and who have been given an education that opens their eyes to village and agricultural problems and gives the means of dealing with them."

20. Results of the New Policy in the Punjab.—What teachers of this type can achieve can be seen in the remarkable progress made in recent years in the Punjab. The percentage of boys at school to the total school-going population in that province increased from 23.9 in 1922 to 44 in 1932 whereas in Bengal it increased only from 37.2 to 48.8. The number of pupils in Class IV increased from 41,729 in 1917 to 109,582 in 1932—in Bengal it remained almost unchanged about 128,000. In other words, in Bengal about 45,000 schools were producing 128,000 literates, but in the Punjab about 10,000 institutions were producing about 109,000 literates; the cost in Bengal was about Rs. 70 lakhs, in the Punjab only about Rs. 38 lakhs. The waste of money and effort in Bengal is lamentable. Nor is this all. The school and the teachers in the Punjab have become the centres of community life. "There is not a tahsil or sub-tahsil, where useful work has not been done by teachers and inspecting officers.....Scores of schoolboys have formed themselves into singing parties for carrying on uplift propaganda in villages.....As a result of this propaganda vigorously pursued, one is beginning to see a streak of light on the horizon, and one has occasion to see signs of the wholesale effect of the work now being done. Thousands of lectures have been given by teachers and inspecting officers. Thousands of people have been vaccinated and inoculated at their persuasion. Prophylactic measures have been taken in hundreds of villages against disease. Streets have been cleaned, manure pits have been dug, wells have been purified, and so forth."

The explanation is simple. In the Punjab, only 17·4 per cent. of the schools are single-teacher schools, in Bengal 59·8 per cent. Nearly three in four of all the primary school teachers in the Punjab are trained, in Bengal only about one in four. In Bengal only about one in five of the men teachers have a higher qualification than that of having passed the primary stage, in the Punjab the proportion is two in three. In 1932 in the Punjab there were 853 pupils in the 18 women's training schools, in Bengal only 234 in the 10 schools.

21. Pay of Primary Teachers.—To attract suitable men and women to the profession of teaching in primary schools and to train them adequately is, therefore, a necessary preliminary and concomitant to any reorganisation of primary education. But this would be hopeless unless the teacher is better paid. In 1932 the average salary in a school under public management was about Rs. 15 and in private schools only a little over Rs. 6. A man during training gets a stipend of Rs. 10, but after training he would be fortunate to get a salary of Rs. 10. Unless the prospects of the teachers are improved, we cannot hope to improve their quality. Government propose to work in future on the plan that in all recognised and aided primary schools the salary of the headmaster should be at least Rs. 20 and that of the assistant masters Rs. 15. The minimum cost of a four-teacher school would thus be Rs. 65 for salaries and about Rs. 10 for contingencies, or Rs. 900 a year. The 16,000 schools proposed would ultimately involve an annual expenditure of Rs. 1,44,00,000.

22. Inspecting staff.—Even good teachers will benefit by the stimulus and check of sympathetic inspection; and a competent inspecting staff is as indispensable as a competent teaching staff. At present the lower inspectorate suffers in two ways: each sub-inspector has far more schools under his charge than he can give proper attention to and he is too often a man trained in the methods of English rather than of vernacular education. The new rural school will need a new type of inspector, a man or woman tuned to the needs and conditions of the village and at home in it. Government suggest, therefore, that the number of sub-inspectors should be fixed at one for a hundred schools, that a fourth of the cadre should be filled up by the most capable and experienced of the primary school headmasters and another fourth from the staffs of the middle vernacular and vernacular training schools. There will thus be a career open to talents among the teachers. It is hoped that at least 10 per cent. of the sub-inspecting staff will be women.

At present sub-inspectors of schools are chosen from those who have passed the course for the degree of Bachelor of Teaching, which is designed more for teachers in secondary schools than for men whose work will be the inspection of primary schools. This training is unsuitable for the type of officer required, and Government propose to institute a new system which will involve a special six months' course at one of the Training Colleges, followed by nine months' practical and theoretical work at selected centres in primary school teaching and supervision, together with an intensive training in rural reconstruction work.

Such men should be able to bring to their work a fresh and sympathetic understanding of the problems of primary education in all its aspects.

23. Secondary Education: (a) Middle Vernacular Schools.—From what has been said of the primary school and its teachers, the significance of the middle vernacular school will be apparent. But nothing has been more striking than the steady decay of these schools in Bengal. In 1917 there were 349 middle vernacular schools, in 1922 only 217 and in 1932 the number had dwindled to 54. Contrast this with the amazing expansion of such schools in the Punjab, where they increased from 151 in 1917 to 672 in 1922, 2,114 in 1927 and 3,241 in 1932 and the enrolment during the period from 28,711 to 447,514. For every one boy in a middle vernacular school in Bengal, there are over a hundred in the Punjab. And this remarkable development is the result of a deliberate policy, most successful in the Punjab but followed also in almost every other province in India. "The aim of vernacular middle education," says the last Quinquennial Report of the United Provinces "is to improve the rural youth, to provide the necessary teachers for elementary education and, while making rural boys literate, to retain them in the country-side." Without a well-distributed system of middle vernacular schools, it would be idle to expect either to improve primary education or to raise the level of village community life or to keep away from English schools the many who do not benefit by higher education and now clog and hinder the work of high schools and colleges. The middle vernacular school is not merely a school where all the instruction is in the vernacular and where English is only an optional subject, it is or should be a school with a rural outlook, adopted to the needs of those who come from the village and will go back to the village. There is no reason why what has been achieved elsewhere should not be accomplished in Bengal and the middle vernacular school made the corner-stone of the new educational programme.

Government propose that there should be one middle vernacular school to every police-station, roughly one middle school to 25 primary schools, and that the number should be gradually increased till the ratio becomes one to five. These schools will have their three middle classes and most of them will have attached to them the four classes of a primary school.

These middle vernacular schools would have a curriculum designed to give a sound general training to rural boys and to fit them in some measure at once for their agricultural occupations and for village uplift work. "What India needs more than anything to-day," wrote the Agricultural Commission, "is a new and wider system of education, a system which will be in harmony with village conditions and requirements, which will train boys and girls desirous of remaining a part of the village and of spending lives of service to the progress of the country-side." Accordingly in the Punjab agriculture forms a part of the course in many middle vernacular schools and "rural science (a composite subject embracing agriculture, science, village sanitation, co-operative and elementary civics) has recently been provided as an alternative to English at the Vernacular Final Examination." The curriculum for Bengal will be on similar lines and is now under preparation.

24. Training Class.—It is from these schools that the primary school teachers will be largely drawn and for the purpose of training them training classes will be attached to selected middle vernacular schools.

25. Revision of Middle and High School curriculum—(b) Middle English and High Schools.—With the establishment of the new type of primary schools, Government will slowly attempt to convert the existing middle English and middle vernacular schools into the improved type of such schools.

The middle English stage will also cover a period of three years and will be intended for the urban or developed areas. But in one important respect it will differ from the present system; it will lead up to the high stage and will be a preparation for it but it will also be complete in itself, providing a satisfactory general training for the boy who wishes either to proceed no further or to pass on to a technical or vocational school. In other words, the end of the middle stage will be a definite terminal or diverting point for many pupils and the curriculum will be constructed accordingly. With the revival and reconstruction of the middle vernacular schools, there will be need for middle English schools only in urban or other developed centres and their numbers can be reduced, with a corresponding improvement in efficiency. In 1932 Bengal had 1,845 middle English schools for boys, while Madras had only 174 and no other province had 600.

Similar improvements are necessary in the high stage as well. The high school should be an avenue to the college, but it should also be a stopping point for a considerable number of the pupils who do not wish to proceed further. With the changes already suggested, the demand for a high school education will probably become less general, especially in the rural areas, in which hundreds of schools are now situated. It will, therefore, be possible to turn many of them into middle English or middle vernacular institutions and to use the resources set free to strengthen the others. At present, the multiplication of schools has led to severe competition, which reduces the number of pupils and the income from fees below the economic minimum and is in many ways detrimental to discipline and efficiency. Government have also been unable to bestow an adequate grant-in-aid on these schools.

26. Comparison of Bengal with Madras in Secondary Education.—A comparison with Madras will illuminate the position in Bengal. A boys' middle English school in Bengal had in 1932 an average enrolment of 88, in Madras 152. A high school in Bengal had 239 pupils and in Madras 416. Between 1912 and 1932, in Bengal 594 new high schools for boys were started, in Madras only 210. The average grant to a boys' secondary school in Madras was Rs. 3,256, in Bengal only Rs. 870. One thousand and forty-nine out of 2,995 boys' secondary schools in Bengal were unaided, in Madras only 9 did not receive aid out of 552. The average number of teachers per school in Madras, taking all secondary schools, was 17, in Bengal 8. 81·6 per cent. of the men teachers in secondary schools in Madras were trained and 30·5 per cent. had a degree, in Bengal the corresponding figures were 19·7 and 22·6. Bengal has about three times as many boys' high schools as Madras, but the number of pupils in the high stage is scarcely greater. These figures are sufficient to show the wide differences in secondary education between two provinces, of which the population and area are approximately the same. Bengal has far more institutions, but they are ill-attended, ill-staffed, inadequately aided or altogether unaided, financially unstable.

27. Necessity of reorganisation.—The reorganisation of vernacular education will, on the one hand, reduce the demand for high English education in Bengal and may render some of the high schools superfluous, and, on the other hand, no radical improvement can be effected without a reduction in the number of institutions in over-schooled areas either by amalgamation or by the abolition of inefficient schools. Both efficiency and the law of supply and demand will point in the same direction; and Government consider it necessary to undertake a survey as a preliminary to a more satisfactory geographical distribution of schools. If the schools are located in the towns and large villages and if competition is eliminated, then each school would have a much larger enrolment than at present, a larger revenue from fees and a larger Government grant, and these in turn would enable it to afford a larger, better paid and better qualified staff and more adequate equipment.

28. Free studentships.—If, however, secondary schools are in future to be situated in the larger centres of population, it follows that boys from the country will often be at a disadvantage in pursuing higher studies. As a complement to their proposals, Government intend accordingly to offer a larger number of free studentships to pupils on the results of the primary and middle school examinations. There will be, as now, a certain number of scholarships for those who occupy the highest places in these examinations; but, in addition, each recognised school will be entitled to grant free studentships to boys who are in need of financial help; these free studentships will be intended primarily for boys from rural schools.

For boys who come from their villages to attend the middle or high school, residential arrangements will also be necessary. Many schools will accordingly have hostels and some concessions should be arranged for those boarders who hold free studentships and under the same conditions.

These concessions will enable a great number of poor and intelligent boys to complete their higher education without serious difficulty; and the concentration of schools will place no obstacle in their way. On the other hand, the generous provision of free studentships may permit in some schools some increase in the rate of fees.

29. Quality of School Work.—One very general complaint is that apart from formal instruction the teacher and the school do very little for the pupils and that even the teaching is lifeless and uninteresting. The last Quinquennial Report stated that "schools are too often merely coaching establishments and neither seek nor achieve any training of the mind in discipline, leadership and corporate action or any proper training of the body." And again, "little effort is made to arouse the dawning intelligence, to develop the innate spirit of questioning and curiosity, to teach through the medium of all the faculties instead of merely one." In these criticisms there is a great element of truth and, especially, at the adolescent stage it is essential that all the latent powers and interests of the boy should be drawn out and that the influences by which he is surrounded should be healthy and happy.

30. New Matriculation Regulations.—It is hoped that the new Matriculation Regulations will go a great way in improving the quality of school work. The average Matriculation student will be better equipped generally, will be required to pay greater attention to History and Geography as compulsory subjects and to pass in a paper of elementary scientific knowledge. His burden will be lightened by the introduction of vernacular as the medium of instruction and examination and he will be able to pay greater attention to English as a language. Every school must also give him training in physical development.

31. The Teacher.—The decisive factor is the capacity and personality of the teacher. If he is a man with some sense of vocation, some pride in his profession, some knowledge of its technique, then he will in one way or another impress himself on his pupils. It is, therefore, of the utmost importance that the best men should be selected as teachers and that, on the other hand, teaching should be made attractive to the best men. At present the teachers in many aided and in most unaided schools are generally obliged to resort to private tuition or other occupation to supplement their meagre salary. Many of them come to school tired—they have little interest in their work, they have no prospects to stimulate their ambition. Government propose, therefore, that in all recognised institutions there should be a minimum scale of salaries for teachers, as well as a minimum number of teachers. Many of them are now overworked and even a school teacher needs leisure if he is to do his best. Teaching is both an art and a mission, and the teacher needs not only vision but quiet if he is to express what is in him. In 1932 in high schools, the average number of teachers in Bengal was 13, in the Punjab 17, in Bombay 17.5, in Madras 20.5, differences only partly to be explained by the existence of divisions in a class.

32. Methods of Training.—The teacher needs also training, as in any other vocation. In this respect, Bengal is very backward. In 1932 there were 15,088 high school teachers in Bengal and in Madras 9,124 and 5,247 in the United Provinces. In the same year, there were 187 students in the training colleges in Bengal, while there were 342 in Madras and 413 in the United Provinces. The training colleges actually supply Bengal with 120 trained graduates on an average every year. The provision for training in the province is sadly inadequate and even if the number of high schools is reduced, it will be many decades before a majority of the teachers are trained.

It is essential that the facilities for training teachers should be extended and this can be done by establishing more training colleges or by devising schemes in which teachers may, under suitable conditions, do a large part of this training while at school.

Although sooner or later Bengal will have to face the necessity for more training colleges, these institutions are expensive things and Government have under examination proposals whereby in specially selected schools teachers may, by carefully supervised reading and practical work, fit themselves for an examination entitling them to a diploma or a shortened course preparatory to taking a degree in teaching.

It is proposed also to make these schools centres at which will be held "training camps"—short courses of training for teachers in individual subjects. Courses would be designed both for primary and secondary school teachers, the former under the supervision of the staffs of Normal Schools the latter under that of Training College staffs.

33. Improvement of teaching.—Teachers with professional keenness and training will be able to make teaching more vivid and stimulating than it is at present. They will remember that it is the business of the teacher not merely to prepare the pupils for an examination but even more to train them to read and think for themselves.

34. General knowledge and library work.—Apart from the formal subjects of instruction, it is of importance that the school-boy should acquire a taste for reading and through it a store of that general knowledge which is the foundation of culture. These are notably lacking at present and the school should devise ways to impart them. Books should be more carefully selected and libraries should be made more easily accessible. It is not unusual now to find a school library, which is open only once a week and from which the issue of books for reading in school or for taking home is made as difficult as possible. Inspection has shown that in many cases library books are kept in a disorderly fashion, equipment jumbled together, stationery and other articles thrown anywhere, instruments and maps uncared for, pictures in class rooms dirty and the school compound bare and untended. In some cases the library books are not at all suitable for school-boys. There are, however, a few schools, where a daily bulletin is put up on the notice board, consisting of cuttings on interesting topics from the newspaper and where at the end of each day five minutes are set apart for a talk on some general subject by one of the teachers. These and other methods can be more widely used to arouse the pupil's interest and to disseminate general information. Government propose to make a beginning with Government schools and they further propose to examine the whole question of library facilities in schools.

35. Responsibility of the parents—Religious and moral teaching in schools.—But the boy is in school only for five or six hours in the day and no sound scheme of education can altogether leave out of account the rest of his time. For that, the school, unless it is a residential school, shares the responsibility with the home and it is well to remember that, while the home and the school should co-operate, neither should trench on the legitimate province of the other. For instance, education in India has often been denounced as "godless," but the indictment is at least as much against the home as against the school. In a country where there is such a variety of religions and where Government profess an attitude of religious neutrality and where society itself is so thoroughly permeated with and controlled by religious rules and observances, instruction in religion can be given most easily and most effectively in the home and the parent has no right to transfer his responsibility altogether to the school. At the same time, in deference to the wishes of a large section of the people that our schools must definitely inculcate some religious or moral teaching, Government are prepared to make a beginning and the question is under examination.

36. Responsibility of the school: Games, etc.—On the other hand there are many things which are best done corporately and which the school can organise better than the individual parent. The care of the health of the boy and his physical development is a task which belongs in large measure to the school. Every school should have its playing fields, and, even where much land is not available there are small-area games which are economical of space and equally interesting and useful.

It often happens, however, that the school regards its responsibility as finished when it provides a playing field: it is far more important that every boy should be induced to play. Not only is the superintendence of teachers necessary, but also their participation in games—and on the playing field the teacher can help the boy to learn many lessons which he can scarcely learn as well in the class room, to co-operate with others, to obey orders, to play fair, to accept defeat with equanimity. The introduction of mid-day tiffin makes the institution of compulsory games practicable; and if schools, when they appoint teachers, could give weight to athletic prowess they would have men who would be at once competent to supervise games and able to evoke the hero-worship and spirit of emulation latent in the boy.

There is considerable scope for the development of increased facilities for recreation, in the widest sense of the term, and extra-school activities. These features of youthful life, which in other countries make it a period so full of interest, are almost unknown in Bengal.

A wise headmaster helped by an enthusiastic staff will discover innumerable ways along which to proceed. Visits to local places of historical interest, to mills and factories, to technical schools and agricultural farms, to waterworks and electric generating stations; the encouragement of hobbies and of interest in machines and instruments, such as aeroplanes, motor cars, microscopes, barometers, etc.; school clubs, musical and dramatic; hand-work, whether artistic or more narrowly educational like the making of geographical models and plans; welfare and social work, the cleaning of tanks and jungle in villages and the care of the sick and those on pilgrimage or at melas and fairs—these are but a few of the methods by which it is possible to arouse in children those instincts of curiosity, creativeness, and sympathy, which lie at the very foundation of all true education.

In order to help schools which are remote from the larger centres of population and whose staffs are, for that reason, out of touch with recent developments in educational practice, Government propose that periodical circulars will be issued containing suggestions and plans for the use of teachers.

37. Other Activities.—Apart from organised exercise and games, there are other ways in which the body, mind and character can be developed. The Scout movement and the Bratachari movement have already spread widely, but in most schools they are represented by a dozen or two dozen boys in a school of some three hundred. There is still abundant scope for expansion and an even greater need for an improvement of the quality of the actual work done. The aim should be for the whole school to participate in a Boy Scout demonstration or Bratachari display or games and sports. "A game for every boy and girl and every boy and girl in a game," should always be the objective. In the last resort, parents and the community generally will rightly judge the value of such movements not by their reputation but by the definite results in their children. There is at present a real danger that they may become mechanical and superficial; and schools and teachers are urged to make sure that they should not attempt more than they can do and that whatever they do should be done well.

38. The "Block" system.—In all these ways the teacher can come near the boy in a friendly and informal manner and can help him; but even here a little organisation is useful and in some schools the boys are all divided into groups or blocks and each placed under a teacher. The teacher is expected to get to know the boys of his group, their homes, their progress, their aptitudes and weaknesses and to help them in every way he can. A relationship of this kind is helpful and the tutor may be able to train and restrain his pupils in many ways that the more formal intercourse of the class room does not permit; but it has its dangers: it would be useless to expect teachers to know everything about the boys nor is it desirable. The value of the relationship depends on its being informal and friendly and, if it becomes inquisitorial, more harm may be done than good. The boy has a right to his own reticences and reserves and a teacher who pushes his way into them will naturally arouse resentment.

39. Need for unified control: Secondary Board.—Many of the suggestions that have been made can be carried out at once, at any rate in Government and aided schools—and that is what Government propose. But it has long been recognised that any radical reform of the secondary system is difficult, if not impossible, as long as the present dual system of control exists. The University can regard the high schools only as preparatory to the colleges but they should be more. While, therefore, Government gladly recognise that in recent years the University has done much to improve the state of the high schools, its work has naturally been limited and the constitution of a separate single controlling authority is an essential condition of thorough reorganisation. Government consider that the proper course would be to establish a Board of Secondary Education to control all middle English and high schools, a Board on which there will be adequate representation for all the different interests involved. The details of the curricula and so forth can be largely left to the Secondary Board to work out; but the broad principles to which attention has been drawn in this Resolution should govern any future reorganisation.

40. Co-ordination of Madrasahs and other Schools.—Government also desire that the reformed madrasahs and the ordinary secondary schools should be co-ordinated so that passage from one to the other and from either to the colleges or professional schools may be made easier and duplication of institutions as far as possible avoided. A scheme is under preparation.

41. Agricultural farming.—It has already been mentioned that, in spite of the predominantly rural and agricultural character of the province, the present system of education is better adapted to an urban rather than to a rural population. A child after a few years of school education develops a tendency to look upon agriculture as an occupation not belonging or suitable to him. He loses interest in his ancestral pursuits and occupations. Bengal is fast losing the position it once held owing to the growth of this spirit among its literate people. The only way to check this is to create an interest for the child in agricultural and rural vocations. It is therefore proposed that every village primary school and every middle or secondary school in rural areas shall have a small plot of land for some form of agricultural or horticultural work such as is provided by farm, garden or poultry. Bengal villages have still enough land to spare for its schools. The proverbial liberality of Bengalis, especially in educational matters, will always find some suitable land for the school farm. The proprietary rights of these lands need not be transferred to the school; it would be quite enough if some land near the school were made available for even a season or two.

In the school field or the garden, the boys, especially those of the upper classes, can be usefully employed during spare hours on Sundays and holidays in growing flowers or vegetables or raising small crops or keeping poultry. Such occupations would be a delightful change from the ordinary class routine and would be both attractive and helpful. In the Phillippines, practically all schools have gardens attached. In middle and secondary schools, the farming will further develop, though some schools will take up other vocational work such as carpentry, weaving, masonry, hut-constructing, etc. For girls, handwork, cooking, home-craft, village hygiene may be substituted.

A boy is very quick to take the colour of his surroundings and the material environment affects him as surely, if not as profoundly, as the intellectual or spiritual. Plato said that he who lives in lovely surroundings will become lovely in soul. But many of our schools are unattractive without and within. It is not possible to erect new buildings everywhere, but much may be done to improve and beautify the existing buildings, by a greater attention to cleanliness, neatness and order, by the removal of dust and dirt, by pictures on the walls and perhaps more than all by the cultivation of school gardens. Such gardens can be cared for by the boys under the guidance of a teacher and will serve not merely to adorn the school compound but to keep the boys engaged in a healthy and delightful occupation. If a boy learns to like books, games and flowers, there will not be much wrong with him.

42. Vocational Schools.—An integral part of the scheme of Government is the diversion, at different stages of general education, of such boys as wish to go further to such institutions as can give them the particular type of training for which they are best fitted. This involves the provision of a carefully graduated series of technical, vocational and professional schools and colleges, which will work in co-operation with the general institutions. Vocational training can be given either in the ordinary schools as a part of or an alternative to the general courses or in special vocational schools. Educational opinion at the present time appears to incline to the view that vocational training is best given in separate schools. On the other hand, it is important that in general schools there should be some kind of manual training or handicraft. This has not only a high educative value as a splendid training for the eye and the hand and as a method of self-expression and creation, but it may help boys to discover and test their aptitudes and may predispose some of them to technical careers. Rural science, including some agricultural training, gardening, carpentry, drawing and painting, needlework, these are all subjects which should form part of the curriculum of the different types of primary and secondary schools. But they are intended to vary and widen the general training of the boy and not to prepare him for a craft or industry. It has already been proposed that, in every Government and aided school and in the new type of primary and middle schools, the school compound shall be arranged to provide for a small farm or a kitchen or flower garden or some other outside interest of this nature but that in the primary stage only boys of the topmost class will do regular work therein. There is at present a definite scheme for vocational training in Bengal. In the junior technical schools there are artisan and technical classes suited respectively to the barely literate and to those who have finished the primary or middle stages. The senior technical schools are intended for those who have passed the Matriculation or Intermediate. What is needed is perhaps a more detailed programme and a more extensive system of schools on these general lines. The proposed rural primary schools will give a boy a general training for his ancestral occupation of agriculture; but there should be also schools for teaching village industries such as carpentry, basket-making and so forth. The urban primary schools should lead out to the middle schools and also to industrial schools imparting a general training in small urban industries, such as smithy and carpentry. The boy who passes out of the middle vernacular school will have the choice between agriculture, primary teachers' training and industrial schools of a rather more advanced type—and the same or slightly different schools would be open to the boy who has passed the middle English stage. Similarly, there should be craft schools for boys who have finished the higher secondary stage. There will thus be three grades of technical or vocational schools and boys should be able to pass from one to the other, if they so wish, just as they pass from one stage of general education to the next.

43. Medical inspection of High School children.—In the past the medical examination of students has not formed a part of school work. We are still far from the time when regular health inspection of primary school pupils is possible. But the examination of the boys of the top five classes is a task that can be easily taken up. Most municipalities and all the district boards have Government Health Officers and the medical inspection of school children is a part of their duties. Unfortunately sufficient attention is rarely given to this side of the work mainly owing to the lack of interest of the school authorities. It is, therefore, proposed that every school will have one teacher or two teachers in charge of the medical inspection of its pupils. It will be his duty to write to the Health Officer to come from time to time and medically inspect the boys. He will maintain a medical inspection register, see that action is taken on each defect, if necessary by placing the matter before the Managing Committee or by arranging with the local hospital or local medical practitioner for free treatment of the poorer pupils. The head master will generally take steps to develop the habit of cleanliness in dress and person and will arrange with the Health Officer for regular quinine treatment of the pupils in the malarious season.

44. Deficient School Areas.—In any proposals of redistribution, it should be borne in mind, a fact which the Government fully recognise, that all Bengal is not overschooled, and there are areas which require more schools than they have at present. It is proposed that in the reorganisation of schools the needs of such areas will be specially considered and it is hoped that this will meet the requirements of the educationally backward communities.

45. Mass Education.—With the introduction of the new Constitutional Reforms, the province will need an intelligent and informed electorate, capable of judging the economic and political issues of importance. The problem, therefore, of educating the masses, apart from making them literate, will soon assume definite importance and the Government feel that some beginning should be made at an early date. The work of educating villagers through the Inspectorate has already been outlined. Another proposal is that important villages should possess village Halls with a small library attached, containing books suitable to village needs and requirements.

But this can be developed only if the public and the people interested come forward with their sympathy, co-operation and generous help.

46. Proposed Programme.—Such is the outline of the proposals which Government now put forward for the improvement of elementary and secondary education. They are designed, on the one hand, to adapt the whole system to the social and economic background of the people and the social and economic requirements of the province, so that a healthy correlation may be established between demand and supply, needs and aptitudes, work and talents; on the other hand, they are intended to improve the quality of the training now given, so that a child should not only get what he is fitted for, but should get the best training possible, a training not only of the memory but of the mind, of the body, of character.

Until the financial condition of the province improves it will not be possible to put into practice at once many of the proposals which have been adumbrated in the preceding paragraphs. But, though progress may be slow, the public has a right to know what is the goal aimed at and how it will be reached. A tentative programme has, therefore, been drawn up to indicate how Government propose to attack the problems of education in Bengal:—

(1) Creation of a Board of Secondary Education.

(2) Transformation of the existing system of primary schools into one of four-class four-teacher schools with a revised syllabus.

(3) Reorganisation and extension of the system of teacher training both for primary and for secondary schools.

(4) Reorganisation of the inspectorate for primary schools.

(5) Insistence on the provision and maintenance of arrangements for healthy extra-academic activities in all Government and aided secondary schools and the withdrawal of grants from schools which do not fulfil these conditions within a fixed time.

(6) Provision of a "vocational" side to the instruction in secondary schools and in the highest classes in primary schools.

(7) Survey of secondary schools with the ultimate object of the establishment of schools where they are necessary, and the consolidation or amalgamation of schools in "overschooled" areas.

(8) Transformation of middle English schools in rural areas to middle vernacular schools.

(9) Co-ordination of the work of maktabas and primary schools, and of madrasahs and secondary schools.

(10) Introduction of some form of religious or moral instruction in schools.

(11) Legislation, if necessary, to prevent wastage in primary schools.

(12) Institution of final examinations at the end of the primary and middle stages.

(13) Provision of craft classes at the end of the primary and middle stages.

(14) Enlargement of the scope of the village school to serve as a village welfare centre in co-operation with other departments and utilisation of the Inspecting Staff for this work.

(15) Better arrangements for the medical inspection of children.

(16) Revision of curriculum on the lines previously indicated.

47. Principles underlying proposals.—The proposals which Government are making are based on two generally recognised facts: first, that the real objects of the different stages of education have been till now confused or neglected, so that it has become necessary to envisage and define them afresh and organise each stage with reference to its object; and, secondly, that the quality of the instruction now given is so unsatisfactory that in many cases it does more harm than good and the youth of the province is being defrauded of its rights. These are the facts which have dictated the proposals and by which they have to be judged. Government have no desire whatever to make the commodity of education more expensive or to restrict the supply; on the contrary, they are proposing to offer a wider variety, a better distribution, so that every boy may be able to obtain what is best adapted to his capacity and best fits him to serve the country, and, at the same time, to improve the quality of the product.

48. Government believe that the proposals, if adopted, will remove or mitigate the chief evils and weaknesses of the existing educational system. The problem of the large numbers of unfit pupils in schools and colleges will be solved, first, by the ruralisation of the primary and middle vernacular schools which will keep the average village boy in the village; secondly, by the provision of alternative courses at the different stages in the vocational, technical and professional institutions; thirdly, by the organisation of each stage of general education as more or less complete in itself; lastly, by better teaching in the school itself and by more individual care and attention. The problem of the large numbers of bad schools will be solved partly by a better and more unified scheme of control and by the grant of recognition and aid only to schools for which there is a need and which are efficient. Government will give more generous grants, but only to institutions which have a reasonable number of pupils in each class, an adequate and well-paid staff and arrangements for extra academic activities. Scholarships will be open only to pupils from such schools and will be tenable only in such schools.

49. The problem of unemployment among the educated classes will probably be simplified by the diversion of large numbers of boys unfit for higher education at different stages and by the increased provision of craft classes. The problem of political terrorism will be mitigated by more adequate control over schools, by greater facilities for and insistence on games and outdoor activities, by the more vigorous exertion of the influence of teachers over their pupils, and generally by providing healthy outlets for the energy and idealism of boys; and, in another way, by the reduction of unemployment.

50. There are other matters to which Government are giving their careful consideration: these include the development of female education, the reorganisation of the college system and the special problems affecting the Muslim community and the scheduled castes and educationally backward classes. It has not been found possible to deal with these questions in this Resolution, but Government hope to formulate their proposals in these spheres as early as possible.

The early establishment at Rajshahi College of an Agricultural Institute with the help of the endowment of the late Kumar Basanta Kumar Roy will provide an interesting experiment in the development of farm work in combination with a scientific laboratory training. With the assistance of the Ministry of Agriculture, schemes have been drawn up for training in dairy work including preparation of butter, cheese, etc., poultry upbringing and horticulture; the latter, it is proposed, should comprise, among other things, the growing of garden produce, and the preparation of such things as syrups, jams, etc., from fruit. Besides those who join the Institute as full-time pupils, students of the college, will be encouraged to employ their spare time in taking courses at the Institute.

The Government College at Krishnagar with its extensive grounds is another obvious place for such experimental work, and the establishment of a Government fruit research institute in Nadia district points to training in fruit-farming as the natural adjunct for the college. There are other colleges in Bengal where agricultural and vocational works can be taken up, provided public opinion gives sympathetic response to the new line of educational activities.

51. Public opinion invited.—Government believe that a thorough overhauling of the whole system of education has long been overdue. The defects and weaknesses they have sketched are far-reaching and every day become more threatening. The time has come for a well-considered policy and for vigorous action. Government have put forward the tentative scheme outlined above, but they recognise that it is not possible to carry out any scheme of educational improvement, unless it is supported by public opinion and has borne the test of scrutiny by educationists. Government, therefore, do not intend to proceed further with the proposals until those interested in the future of education and the welfare of the province have had an opportunity of expressing their opinion on them. Government will give the most careful consideration to any criticism and any alternative proposals that may be brought to their notice.

Such opinions should reach the Secretary, Department of Education, Government of Bengal, on or before September 30th, 1935.

PRACTICAL.

Bisection of angles and of straight lines.

Construction of perpendiculars to straight lines.

Construction of an angle equal to a given angle.

Construction of parallels to a given straight line.

Construction of triangles with given parts.

Division of a straight line into a given number of equal parts.

Construction of a parallelogram equal to a given triangle and having one of its angles equal to a given angle.

Construction of a triangle equal in area to a given rectilineal figure.

Construction of a tangent to a circle.

Easy extensions of these constructions may be given as problems.

Candidates may be required to give the reasons for any particular construction involved in any question.

Every candidate is required to provide himself with the following:—a hard pencil, dividers, pencil compasses and a straight ruler showing centimetres and inches.

THEORETICAL.

Angles at a Point.

If a straight line stands on another straight line, the sum of the two angles so formed is equal to two right angles and the converse.

If two straight lines intersect the vertically opposite angles are equal.

Parallel Straight Lines.

If a straight line, cutting two other straight lines, makes—

(i) the alternate angles equal,

(ii) two corresponding angles equal,

(iii) the interior angles on the same side of the line supplementary, then the two straight lines are parallel, and the converse.

Straight lines which are parallel to the same straight line are parallel to one another.

Triangles and Rectilineal Figures.

The sum of the angles of a triangle is equal to two right angles.

If the sides of a convex polygon are produced in order, the sum of the angles so formed is equal to four right angles.

Two triangles are equal in every respect—

(i) if two sides and the included angle of one triangle are respectively equal to two sides and the included angle of the other;

(ii) if two angles and a side of the one triangle are respectively equal to two angles and the corresponding side of the other.

If two sides of a triangle are equal, the angles opposite to the sides are equal and the converse.

Two triangles are equal in every respect, if the three sides of one triangle are respectively equal to the three sides of the other.

Two right-angled triangles are equal in every respect, if they have their hypotenuses equal and one side of the one equal to one side of the other.

If two sides of a triangle are unequal the greater side has the greater angle opposite to it and the converse.

Any two sides of a triangle are together greater than the third.

Of all the straight lines that can be drawn to a given straight line from a given point outside it the perpendicular is the shortest.

The opposite sides and angles of a parallelogram are equal; each diagonal bisects the parallelogram and the diagonals bisect one another.

If there are three or more parallel straight lines and the intercepts made by them on any straight line that cuts them are equal, then the corresponding intercepts on any other straight line that cuts them are equal.

Areas.

Parallelograms on the same or equal bases and of the same altitude are equal in area.

Triangles on the same or equal bases and of the same altitude are equal in area.

Equal triangles on the same or equal bases are of the same altitude.

Illustrations and explanations of the geometrical theorems corresponding to the following algebraical identities:—

$$k(a+b+c\dots) = ka+kb+kc+\dots$$

$$(a+b)^2 = a(a+b) + b(a+b).$$

$$a(a+b) = a^2 + ab.$$

$$(a+b)^2 = a^2 + 2ab + b^2.$$

$$(a-b)^2 = a^2 - 2ab + b^2.$$

$$a^2 - b^2 = (a-b)(a+b).$$

The square on a side of a triangle is greater than, equal to, or less than, the sum of the squares on the other two sides, according as the angle contained by those sides is obtuse, right or acute. The difference in the cases of inequality is twice the rectangle contained by one of the two sides and the projection on it of the other.

Loci.

The locus of a point which is equidistant from two fixed points is the perpendicular bisector of the straight line joining the two fixed points.

The locus of a point which is equidistant from two intersecting straight lines consists of the pair of straight lines which bisect the angles between the two given lines.

The Circle.

A straight line drawn from the centre of a circle to bisect a chord, which is not a diameter, is at right angles to the chord; conversely, the perpendicular to a chord from the centre bisects the chord.

There is one circle, and one only, which passes through three given points not in a straight line.

In equal circle (or in the same circle) (i) if two arcs subtend equal angles at the centre, they are equal; (ii) conversely, if two arcs are equal, they subtend equal angles at the centre.

In equal circle (or in the same circle) (i) if two chords are equal, they cut off equal arcs; (ii) conversely, if two arcs are equal, the chords of the arcs are equal.

Equal chords of a circle are equidistant from the centre, and the converse.

The tangent at any point of a circle is perpendicular to the radius through the point.

If two tangents are drawn to a circle from an external point, (i) they are equal, (ii) they subtend equal angles at the centre of the circle.

If two circles touch, the point of contact lies on the straight line through the centres.

The angle which an arc of a circle subtends at the centre is double that which it subtends at any point on the remaining part of the circumference.

Angles in the same segment of a circle are equal; and if the line joining two points subtends equal angles at two other points on the same side of it, the four points lie on a circle.

The angle in a semicircle is a right angle; the angle in a segment greater than a semicircle is less than a right angle; and the angle in a segment less than a semicircle is greater than a right angle.

The opposite angles of any quadrilateral inscribed in a circle are supplementary and the converse.

If a straight line touch a circle and from the point of contact a chord be drawn, the angles which this chord makes with the tangent are equal to the angles in the alternate segments.

If two chords of a circle intersect either inside or outside the circle, the rectangle contained by the parts of the one is equal to the rectangle contained by the parts of the other.

On the Concurrence of Straight Lines in a Triangle.

(i) The perpendiculars drawn to the sides of a triangle from their middle points are concurrent.

(ii) The bisectors of the angles of a triangle are concurrent.

(iii) The medians of a triangle are concurrent.

(iv) The perpendiculars from the vertices of a triangle to the opposite sides are concurrent.

Each question on theoretical Geometry shall consist of a theorem contained in the above schedule together with an easy deduction.

Any proof of a proposition shall be accepted, which appears to the Examiners to form part of a systematic treatment of the subject, but proofs of theorems should, as far as possible, be based on first principles. The order in which the theorems are stated in the above schedule is not to be regarded as essential.

In the proof of theorems and deductions from them, it shall be permissible to use hypothetical constructions.

The ordinary symbolical abbreviations may be used.

The practical examination will be held with a view to testing the candidate's ability to teach English in any of the classes of a recognised High School.

7. The examination shall be conducted as follows:—

8. 150 marks shall be assigned to the Written Examination. The minimum required for a pass shall be 60 marks.

150 marks shall be assigned to the Oral Examination, of which 100 marks shall be allotted to the reading of English prose and poetry and 50 marks to conversation. The minimum required for a pass shall be 60 marks.

200 marks shall be assigned to the Practical Examination. The minimum required for a pass shall be 100 marks.

Under certain circumstances enumerated in paragraph 9 of this chapter, exemptions from appearing at the written examination may, however, be obtained.

9. The following teachers who have been in service in recognised schools on the 31st March, 1935, but who do not possess the qualifications mentioned in Section 9 (B) of Chapter XXI of the Regulations shall be exempted from appearing at the written portion of the examination:—

(i) Head Masters of recognised schools.

(ii) All Assistant Head Masters and Assistant Teachers who have served as teachers of English in recognised schools.

11. Candidates must appear at the Written, Oral and Practical Examinations together, unless otherwise exempted. If any candidate passes in the written portion, but fails in the Oral and/or Practical, he will be entitled to appear at the Oral and/or Practical portion of the examination as the case may be, in the next three examinations. Condition of sale.

1. The Divisional Forest Officer is not bound to accept the highest or any offer for any lot.
2. Successful bidders shall immediately deposit as earnest money one-tenth of the total bid in treasury chalan, which will be returned if the sale is not confirmed and will be retained as security deposit if the sale is confirmed.
3. Purchasers will be required to sign agreements in printed forms for outright sales. Copy of this form may be seen at the Divisional Forest Office, Chittagong, and at the Range offices.
4. The following are among the conditions of the agreements for all lots of the sale :—
 - (1) Felling and extraction to be completed by the 31st May 1936 for the selection felling coupes and 15th March 1936 for the clear felling coupes.
 - (2) The purchase price is to be paid in equal instalments as follows :—

	Selection Felling Coupes.	Clear Felling Coupes.
1st instalment	.. 21st October 1935	.. 21st October 1935.
2nd instalment	.. 2nd January 1936	.. 2nd January 1936.
3rd instalment	.. 1st February 1936	.. 1st February 1936.
4th instalment	.. 1st March 1936

5. Failure to sign the agreement within one month of confirmation of sale will render the purchaser liable to forfeiture of his security deposit.

The lot or lots so affected shall be re-sold by public auction or otherwise as the Divisional Forest Officer may think fit, and the defaulting purchasers shall be liable to make good any shortage on such re-sale.

6. "D" class poles used for saw-benches will not be charged for unless removed. They must, however, be marked by a Forest Officer before felling, and if removed will be charged for at schedule rates. [This will not apply to clear felling coupes.]

BENGAL LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL DEPARTMENT.

NOTIFICATION.

No. 2938L.C.—25th July, 1935. —The following Minute of dissent by Munindra Deb Rai Mahasai, M.L.C., on the Bengal Development Bill, 1935, is hereby published for general information :—

Minute of dissent by Munindra Deb Rai Mahasai, M.L.C., on the Bengal Development Bill, 1935.

I welcomed this Bill as a beneficent measure when it was first introduced in the Council, but at the same time I did not fail to point out that it was not an ideal one and was capable of improvement in the Select Committee stage. As I was in Europe when the Select Committee sat at Darjeeling I could neither participate nor listen to the discussions that took place at that stage. I think it is the primary duty of Government to provide for irrigation of the country under its charge and not to tax the people for the same, but in the present circumstances no improvement is possible without further taxation. I think Government should not share any profit accruing from improvement of land but may recover the amount of actual cost incurred with interest on the capital invested. I have also got objections to some of the provisions of the Bill which I intend to submit when the Bill will come up to the House for discussion.

Directions for note.

1. A pay bill may be submitted to the Accountant-General five days before the last working day of the month by the labour of which the pay is earned.

2. Bills are liable to be delayed in reaching the Audit Office if sent by post or forwarded in a closed cover. They should, therefore, so far as possible, be presented by hand or in an open cover at the Receiving Counter of the Audit Office.

3. In exchange for each bill so presented a metal token will be issued, which should be produced when payment is called for.

4. A pay bill may, if desired, be enfaced for payment to a Banker or Agent and submitted for collection through such Banker or Agent; this will obviate the necessity of the officer's attendance in person or by messenger, as payment may then be made direct to the Banker or Agent.

5. All pay bills are paid by cheques issued on the Imperial Bank of India if the amount exceeds Rs. 20 or in cash if the amount is not more than Rs. 20.

6. When payment is to be made by crossed cheque sent by post, the cheque will be sent by the Audit Office without further action on the part of the payee. He must, however, acknowledge its receipt by return of post. Failure or delay to do this will render the drawer liable to forfeit this privilege. When payment is to be received in person or through messenger, an intimation will be given as soon as possible after the bill is passed. It is not necessary that an intimation should have been received by the payee before he can be paid. The payee can send his messenger with the receipt (and token and intimation if issued) in the following form:—

"Received by Cash/Cheque Rs..... from the.....
payment of my pay bill No.....
dated.....193 . for.....
.....193 ."

7. When exemption is claimed in respect of any amount paid to an Insurance Company, the original receipt of the Company for the amount paid or an attested copy thereof should be attached to the pay bill. The receipt will be returned with the cheque.

8. The period for which a subscription to a fund is due should be specified when it differs from the period for which pay is drawn.

9. The fund deductions of a Covenanted Civil Servant are taken upon his allowances before deductions on account of Civil Service Provident Fund.

10. The Government of India exercises no supervision over the management of the Hindu Family Annuity Fund, the General Family Pension Fund and the Bengal Christian Family Pension Fund and is in no way responsible for their solvency.

11. In the case of officers entitled to Sterling Overseas Pay, fund deductions are based on the Rupee pay plus the Rupee equivalent of the Sterling Overseas Pay.

12. When the deduction on account of income-tax shown in the bill includes tax calculated on Sterling Overseas Pay, the details of the calculation, on which the deduction is based may be given at the foot of the bill or, if there be no space at the foot, in some other suitable place; the total being brought into the body of the bill in the appropriate place and the two entries connected with a letter mark or otherwise. The details should show the sterling amount of the Overseas Pay as also its Rupee equivalent.

Note 1.—Audit Officers should see that all compulsory deductions including those for the L. C. S. Provident Fund are duly made and the schedules showing particulars of all fund deductions are attached to the pay bills.

Note 2.—Subscribers to the Sterling Branch should note on the bill and in Fund schedule attached to the bill that the recoveries relate to the Sterling Branch.

Page 134—S. R. 40.—Insert the words "or (in the case of Presidency Payments) Form No. 1A" after "Form No. 1" in line 2 of this rule.

Now, therefore, in exercise of the power conferred by the second proviso to sub-section (1) of section 41 of the said Act, the Governor in Council is pleased to order that all adult workers employed in jute pressing factories with the exception of the mechanical and press house staff employed therein, shall be exempted from the provisions of the said section, provided the following conditions are observed by such factories, namely:—

Now, therefore, in exercise of the power conferred by sub-section (1) of section 44 of the said Act, the Governor in Council is pleased to order that the provisions of sections 39 and 40 of the said Act in respect of such adult workers shall be so relaxed that the said provisions will not apply to such adult workers, provided the following conditions are observed by such factories, namely:—

(a) no such adult worker shall be employed on a Sunday,

(b) the periods for work of such adult workers shall be within the limits of 6 a.m. and 6 p.m. or in the case where the Chief Inspector by order in writing so directs, within the limits of 7 a.m. and 7 p.m., and

7. On taking such possession the said Government may sell or otherwise deal with the said land as it may think proper.

(i) Should the said Government sell the land with all the buildings the said Government, after deducting the expenses incurred in connection with the said taking of possession and with such sale, shall pay the proceeds to the Company.

NOTIFICATION.

No. 3042L.C.—1st August, 1935.—In pursuance of the provisions of rule 20 of the Bengal Legislative Council Rules, 1920, the following Bill which was introduced in the Bengal Legislative Council on the 30th July, 1935, is hereby published for general information together with the Statement of Objects and Reasons annexed thereto.

THE BENGAL VILLAGE SELF-GOVERNMENT (TEMPORARY PROVISIONS) BILL, 1935.

A BILL

to provide for certain matters in connection with certain elections for union boards held before the commencement of the Bengal Village Self-Government (Amendment) Act, 1935.

WHEREAS it is expedient to make special provision for the term of office of members of union boards in certain cases in which general elections were held before the commencement of the Bengal Village Self-Government (Amendment) Act, 1935, and for the removal of any doubts as to the validity of such elections and of appointments of members made in such cases ;

Ben. Act
VIII of 1935.

It is hereby enacted as follows :—

Short title.

1. This Act may be called the Bengal Village Self-Government (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1935.

Term of office of members of union boards in certain cases, and validity of certain elections and appointments.

2. Notwithstanding anything contained in the Bengal Village Self-Government Act, 1919—of 1919.

(1) Where a general election has been held for a union board before the commencement of the Bengal Village Self-Government (Amendment) Act, 1935 (hereinafter referred to as the amending Act), but after such election the first meeting, at which a quorum is present, of the newly elected and appointed members of such union board has not been held, the term of office of the formerly elected and appointed members of the union board shall be governed by the provisions of section 11 of the Bengal Village Self-Government Act, 1919, as if it had not been amended by clause (1) of section 6 of the amending Act.

(2) Where a member has been duly elected at such general election, or has been duly appointed after such general election but before the commencement of the amending Act, such member shall be deemed to be duly elected or appointed, as the case may be, under the Bengal Village Self-Government Act, 1919, as amended by the amending Act, and his election or appointment shall be deemed to be valid for all purposes of the said Act, as so amended.

J. W. MCKAY,
Secy. to the Bengal Legis. Council.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

Under clause (1) of section 6 of the Bengal Village Self-Government (Amendment) Act, 1935, which came into force on the 4th July, 1935, the term of office of members of union boards has been extended from three to four years. In a number of unions, however, elections have already been held and in a few others appointments also made but the new boards could not be declared as duly constituted before the amending Act came into force; this has given rise to an anomalous position, viz., that the persons, who have been duly elected or appointed and whose election or appointment, therefore, remains valid even after the commencement of the amending Act, will have to wait for about a year before the new boards can be constituted. It is considered that the best way of removing the anomaly will be to have such union boards, duly constituted as early as possible. This Bill accordingly seeks to provide that, in the case of these union boards, the term of office of the formerly elected and appointed members of the union board will, subject to the proviso to section 11 of the Bengal Village Self-Government Act, 1919, expire on the date of the first meeting of the newly elected and appointed members of the Board at which a quorum is present.

Government of India's decision.

Insert the following as Government of India's decision:—

(3) For the purposes of the application of F. R. 91 the period of voyage to or from India is treated as leave out of Asia during which leave salary is payable in sterling. This applies to all direct (i.e., unbroken) voyages between India and a port outside Asia irrespective of the route followed and the time spent in Asia on the voyage, including stoppages incidental thereto (e.g., for the purpose of transshipment); i.e., it is meant to apply to all cases in which the period spent in Asia after embarking from India appears, on a liberal interpretation, to be a bona fide halt in the course of a voyage to or from Asia. The intention is, however, not to make leave salary payable in sterling when the voyage is broken in Asia at the volition of the officer or when he spends a portion of his leave in Asia before proceeding to another continent or resuming his duties in India.

Note.—The Government of Bengal have adopted this decision for persons subject to their rule-making control.

A certificate which is not embodied in the original sanctioning orders is not a valid certificate acceptable to audit.

Bills introduced in the Bengal Legislative Council, Reports of Select Committees presented or to be presented to that Council, and Bills published before introduction in that Council.

BENGAL LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL DEPARTMENT.

NOTIFICATION.

No. 3223L.C. — 17th August, 1935.—The following report of the Select Committee on the Bengal, Agra and Assam Civil Courts (Bengal Amendment) Bill, 1934, with the Bill embodying amendments recommended by them, is hereby published for general information.

Report of the Select Committee on the Bengal, Agra and Assam Civil Courts (Bengal Amendment) Bill, 1934.

We, the members of the Select Committee of the Bengal Legislative Council to which the Bengal, Agra and Assam Civil Courts (Bengal Amendment) Bill, 1934, was referred by a motion carried in the Bengal Legislative Council on the 30th July, 1935, have the honour to submit this our Report with the Bill, embodying amendments recommended by us, annexed. All matter omitted by the Select Committee has been printed in italics and enclosed in square brackets and all new matter inserted has been underlined.

(1) The Bill was published in English in the Calcutta Gazette of the 29th November, 1934, before introduction.

(2) The Committee met for the first time on the 5th August, 1935, and concluded its sitting on the 6th August, 1935.

(3) We do not consider that the Bill has been so altered as to require republication.

(4) The changes made in the Bill are as follows :—

Clause 1.—We have completed the year of the Act in clause 1 (1).

Clause 3.—The figures “141” were a misprint for “114”. This has been corrected.

Clause 5.—We have redrafted clause 5 so as to empower the Local Government to invest a Munsif with jurisdiction up to three thousand five hundred rupees so long as he holds his Court at a place where the Court of a Subordinate Judge is held.

Clause 7.—We have reduced the limits of “one thousand rupees” and “five hundred rupees” to “seven hundred and fifty” and “three hundred” respectively, as we consider the lower limits more desirable for the present.

While we recommend that the Bill, as reported on by us, be passed, we express the hope although we are assured that there is no such intention on the part of Government, that the extended powers now provided in the Bill will not result in adversely affecting, or be used to the detriment of, the financial prospects of Munsifs in the service of Government.

NOTIFICATIONS.

No. 10796P. — 27th August 1935. — The following notification issued by the Government of Assam is republished for general information.

G. P. Hogg,

Chief Secy. to the Govt. of Bengal.

The 12th June 1935.

No. 1752R.—In the notification dated the 7th May 1884, published at page 596, Part I of the Calcutta Gazette, dated the 14th May 1884, the boundary between the district of Sylhet and Hill Tippera (Tripura State) was described, for the portion extending eastward from the Iktiarpur masonry pillar to a point on the Iangui river due west of the Chhatachura or Koylalyon Hill Station, as that defined on the maps of 1860-65 and marked on the ground by pakka pillars as ordered in Government letter No. 1265, dated the 31st March 1865. But owing to the erratic course of a streamlet named Murai chara a dispute arose regarding the correct boundary running along that streamlet and included in the notification mentioned above. This disputed portion of the boundary lying between the junction of the Murai chara with the Manu river and the Fenai chara post was surveyed jointly and demarcated by pillars in 1918-19. It is now found expedient to notify this portion of the boundary as follows:—

“From the confluence of the Manu river and Murai chara the boundary runs in an easterly direction up the midstream of the latter till it becomes broad and swampy for some distance on the south and east of the loop like area known as the “Bagher Dil,” thence along the midstream of this broad portion till the chara resumes its normal course and from there the midstream of the said chara as surveyed jointly in 1918-19 by the Assam Survey Department and a surveyor of the Tripura State and shown in the map, then prepared, to a point about a furlong west of the Fenai chara post, where the Murai chara leaves the Sylhet Tripura State boundary and where a pakka pillar has been erected; thence direct to the Fenai chara post.”

“This portion of the boundary has been demarcated with thirty pillars including the Dattagram pakka pillar and the Fenai chara post.”

Rules for the guidance of private candidates for the Matriculation Examination of 1936.

The following rules for the guidance of private candidates for the Matriculation Examination are published for general information.

1. Private students are those who have not attended any recognised or unrecognised school for at least one year previous to the examination. The term "private students" includes bonâ fide school-masters.

2. Private students must appear at the Test Examination of one of the following institutions on the dates mentioned below:—

Comilla Zilla School, Noakhali R. K. Zilla School, Chittagong Collegiate School and Rangamati High English School.

Date of examination—22nd, 23rd, 25th, 26th and 27th November 1935.

Female candidates and teachers of schools recognised by the Calcutta University, or any other University or any Board of Secondary Education in India are not required to pass the test examination for private candidates held by the Inspector of Schools, Chittagong Division.

3. Private candidates offering hygiene as one of their subjects need not obtain the previous permission of University for that purpose. They will be required to satisfy the Inspector of Schools that they have undergone a course of training in the subject. For this purpose they should submit to the Divisional Inspector of Schools, along with their applications for permission to appear at the test examination, certificates of training in it from a recognised medical practitioner or from a recognised teacher in hygiene.

4. Each private student will pay a fee of Rs. 5 to the head of the institution in which he appears for the Test Examination. No private student will be admitted to the Test Examination unless he is accompanied for the purpose of identification by some person known to the headmaster of the institution in which he appears.

5. Application for permission to appear at the Test Examination must be sent in time in duplicate in the enclosed form so as to reach this office not later than the 15th November 1935.

N. B.—A student who failed to pass or appear at the annual examination for promotion to class X at the end of the session 1934 and then left the school can, under no circumstances, be allowed to appear at the Test Examination.

6. The Inspector on being satisfied will grant necessary permission and return the application, which will then be the candidate's passport for admission to the Test Examination.

7. Every candidate must deposit his fee for the Test Examination with the headmaster of the institution in which he intends to appear, at least 15 days before the date of that examination. The headmaster will deposit the amount realized by him into the local Treasury and forward a copy of the Treasury chalan to this office. He should also submit to this office an account of the charges incurred by him (including remuneration to examiners) for conducting the examination of private candidates, together with vouchers in support of the charges, on receipt of which the Director of Public Instruction will be moved to sanction the expenditure.

8. The headmasters of the institutions named in paragraph 2 above should direct private candidates who satisfy the test to appear before them in due time, with their applications for admission to the Matriculation Examination, and to sign them in their presence. They will then grant the necessary certificate and forward the applications to the Inspector for countersignature, after which they will be returned to the headmasters for delivery to the candidates concerned.

9. In no circumstances should the fee for the Matriculation Examination be sent to the Inspector's office. It should be sent to the Controller of Examinations, Calcutta University, by the candidates themselves, together with the countersigned applications.

10. Private students must understand that the Test Examination of any school other than those named above will not be accepted by the Inspector.

11. The Matriculation Examination will be held in March 1936, the exact dates of which will be notified by the University.

12. Applications and fees for admission to the Matriculation Examination must reach the office of the Controller of Examinations on or before the date to be fixed by the University.

Forecast of the Summer Til (Sesamum) Crop of Bengal, 1935-36.

(Note.—On an average of the five years ending 1932-33, the area under til in Bengal has represented some 2·4 per cent. of the total area under til in British India.)

Character of the season.—The weather was, on the whole, unfavourable both for the period of sowing and growing in North and West Bengal. As a result outturn was reduced. In East Bengal, on the other hand, occasional showers facilitated sowings and growth thereby increasing the area and outturn generally.

Acreage.—The area sown this year is estimated at 115,200 acres as against 107,300 acres last year.

Outturn.—From the District Officers' estimates the average outturn of the crop for the province works out at 81 per cent. of the normal this year as against 77 per cent. last year.

Taking the normal yield as 7 2/5th maunds per acre, the gross outturn of the crop for the province is estimated at about 25,400 tons this year as against 22,500 tons last year.

Director of Agriculture, Bengal (offg.).

Resolution on the report on the Administration of the Jail Department of the Presidency of Bengal for the year 1934.

GOVERNMENT OF BENGAL.

Political Department.

Jails.

CALCUTTA, THE 25TH JULY 1935.

RESOLUTION No. 3361P.J.

Read—

The Report on the Administration of the Jail Department of the Presidency of Bengal for the year 1934.

Read also—

The reports for the years 1931, 1932 and 1933 and the resolutions of Government thereon.

1. It was pointed out last year that the decrease of civil disobedience prisoners had not been accompanied by any corresponding decrease of ordinary prisoners during 1933. During 1934, the admissions exceeded those of 1933 by 3,185 (including transfers) and the average daily strength rose from 21,405·39 to 21,850·57, the highest average of any year during the past decade, except 1932. Although the two special jails at Dum Dum and the one at Hijli, started during the civil disobedience period, were kept open, all the central jails and most of the district jails were consistently overcrowded resulting in great strain upon the administrative staff. It seems clear now that there is no hope of the jail population being reduced again to the level of the average of the years preceding 1930, and it has become imperative that steps should now be taken to increase the permanent accommodation in the jails to cope with a permanently increased jail population.

In spite of the increase in the number of prisoners, however, the total cost of guarding and maintenance fell from Rs. 29,44,204 in 1933 to Rs. 29,07,789, the average cost per head being Rs. 129·4 against Rs. 133·9 in 1933. It is gratifying to find that the cost of maintenance and guarding has thus increased by 14 per cent. only, though the average daily population has increased by 56 per cent. over that of 1929.

2. The number of terrorist prisoners at the close of the year was 445 against 350 at the close of the preceding year, the number admitted during the year being 761 against 741 of the previous year. Thirty-nine were deported to the Andamans, of whom 27 were from Bengal. Five were repatriated on medical grounds and for release. The presence of so many terrorists in jails was a source of constant anxiety, for they continued to defy jail rules and the directions of the jail authorities, to make plans for escapes, and to attempt to seduce the weaker among the warder staff. In June 1934 two terrorist convicts escaped from the Midnapore Jail, while soon after, three terrorist under-trials escaped from the Rampurhat sub-jail. All these were recaptured. These escapes were followed, on the 31st July, by the escape of four undertrial prisoners of the Inter-Provincial Conspiracy case from the Alipore Central Jail. One was recaptured the following day, but the remainder had not been traced when the year closed. It is evident that the custody of terrorist prisoners presents special features very different from those of the ordinary prisoners, and that precautions which are good enough for the latter do not suffice for the terrorist. The lack of adequate accommodation, ordinary and cellular, makes segregation from other prisoners and from each other difficult. Since the close of the year projects for the extension of cellular accommodation in two of the central jails have been sanctioned, but though they will ease the situation they will not in any sense be adequate to requirements.

3. The earthquake of the 15th January caused extensive damage to the jail buildings at Darjeeling. The shock was so severe that the major portion of the wall on the north side of the jail, the warders' barrack on the north side, the main wards and the major portion of the perimeter wall collapsed beyond repair. There was, fortunately, no loss of life either among the staff and their families, or the prisoners. The latter, however, were panic-stricken, and had to be collected in the yard away from all structures, and locked up for the night in the two worksheds, in the cells and in the hospital. None attempted to escape. The jailer and deputy jailer remained in the jail throughout the night supervising guarding, and the work of the warder staff was commendable.

The jails at Jalpaiguri and Dinajpur were also damaged by the earthquake but the damage was comparatively slight.

4. It is gratifying to learn that as a result of the instructions issued last year, the number of boys sent to the Borstal School at Bankura instead of to jail has been steadily increasing. The number of admissions during the year under review was 172 against 90 in the previous year, and the average daily attendance rose from 177·32 in 1933 to 214·64. The programme of education consists of literary, physical and industrial training supplemented by moral and religious instruction. Though the general standard aimed at is the primary school stage, boys who are fit for higher education are given instruction up to the Matriculation standard. One hundred and ninety-seven boys appeared at the annual examination held by the Education Department of whom 153 passed, and 7 boys read for the Matriculation Examination of 1935 during the year under report. It is reported that about 75 per cent. of the boys were illiterate on admission, but all of them received instruction up to the primary standard by the time of their release. The number of orders received from outside was sufficient to keep the boys engaged in all branches of industries in which they receive training, throughout the year. On the physical side, regular exercises were given daily under a paid Drill Instructor and boys were allowed to play football, hockey and cricket, among other games, and in matches against outside teams. A beginning has been made with a scout troop which it is hoped to develop gradually. Fifty-two boys were released on licence during the year, and 20 on expiry, of whom 50 (46 on licence and 4 on expiry) were sent to the Aftercare Association at Alipore. It is gratifying to learn that the greater part of them are reported to be leading steady lives. The success of the Borstal treatment must depend in a large measure on the guidance and assistance given to the offender subsequent to his discharge from the school, and while congratulating the Aftercare Association at Alipore on the good work done by them during the year, the Governor in Council hopes that District Officers will endeavour to form Aftercare associations in those districts in which they do not at present exist. The Governor in Council is glad to learn that the Visiting Committee of the Borstal School visited the school regularly and took great interest in its welfare.

5. It is a matter of serious concern that the number of juvenile convicts shows no tendency to drop. This class of the jail population is peculiarly sensitive to political agitation, and the increase in numbers in 1930 and 1932 was directly attributable to the general spirit of lawlessness which prevailed in those years as the figure given below will show :—

Age.	Years
	1928.	1929.	1930.	1931.	1932.	1933.	1934.
Under 16	.. 75	130	719	165	369	131	151
16—21	.. 2,010	2,469	8,628	3,881	8,821	5,227	5,210

The Civil Disobedience Movement has been called off, but its aftermath remains, and probably accounts for the larger number of youths between 16—21 who resort to crime. It may be hoped that as the economic situation improves and the political situation gets more settled there will be some decline in their number, but it is unlikely that it will ever get back to what it was before 1930, and it seems likely that it will be necessary in the near future to have more institutions of the Borstal type. Meanwhile, subject to the limitations of accommodation and funds, special arrangements are being made for them as far as possible. The former female jail at Berhampore has been set apart for juveniles and something on the lines of Borstal training is being attempted. The prisoners are given primary education and physical training there under paid teachers, while instruction in useful handicrafts, such as weaving, tailoring, carpentry, etc., is imparted by well-behaved convict teachers. Lack of funds has so far stood in the way of replacement of such instructors by a paid agency from outside. In the Alipore Central Jail rudimentary lessons in the vernaculars and English as well as industrial training and physical instruction are being given to adolescent criminals. In the Presidency Jail only primary education is imparted to this class of prisoners.

6. The long detention of undertrial prisoners has been the subject of annual comment for several years past. It is, therefore, pleasant to record a distinct improvement in this respect in some of the districts, e.g., Midnapore, 24-Parganas, Mymensingh, Faridpur, Bakarganj and Tippera. But there are other districts which show a deterioration in respect of undertrials both in Sessions and in Magistrates cases, the most notable of which are Hooghly, Dinajpur, Pabna, Bogra, Rajshahi (Sessions cases only), and Chittagong. It is clear that continued vigilance is called for both on the part of District Magistrates and District Judges, specially as the admission of undertrials has gone up very considerably in recent years, and is far in excess of the accommodation available for them.

7. Last year it was noticed with regret that the number of short-term sentences of less than one month had increased from 9,166 in 1932 to 10,714 in 1933, which was 60 per cent. higher than the number imposed in 1929. During the year under report the number increased still further to 13,629. The explanation probably is that there has been a large increase in petty crime, and in Railway cases, in which fines are difficult to realise. Nevertheless, it must be reiterated that such sentences are neither deterrent nor reformatory, and the Governor in Council trusts that trying courts will realise the harmful effect of bringing the chance offender into contact with the real criminal by sentences of this kind, and will try to avoid them by the imposition of alternative punishments.

8. The presence of a large number of terrorist prisoners, and the serious overcrowding to which reference has been made in the preceding paragraphs, must necessarily both impose a very serious strain on the guard staff, which includes a large number of men recruited on a temporary basis to cope with the overcrowding, and also have untoward effects on discipline. It is not surprising, therefore, that the number of dismissals in the warder staff should have risen from 49 in 1933 to 58 in the year under report. But the total of dismissals was a good deal below the figure for 1932, which was 99, and considering the large number of the temporary staff, the increase is not more than might be expected. It is satisfactory that the general standard of recruits continues to improve, and that steps are being taken to improve the standard of efficiency among head warders. Five senior warders (one from each circle) are being trained at the Police Training School, and it is expected that on their return it will be possible to make improvements in the efficiency of the whole force.

The general discipline among ordinary convicts continued to be satisfactory.

9. The Governor in Council has read with interest of the improvement effected recently in the libraries in the central jails. With a larger influx of literate and educated prisoners it is necessary that the jails should provide sufficient reading matter for those who want to use their spare time in this manner. Government have had occasion recently to review this matter and have directed that steps should be taken to improve the existing jail libraries and to start new libraries in district jails.

10. The net earnings from the jail industries increased from Rs. 3,30,050 in 1933 to Rs. 3,40,535 in spite of trade depression. The woollen factory at Dacca continued to do well and received orders from State jails. The profits of the jail depot increased slightly though unfortunately it lost a valuable order for blankets from the Indian Store Department.

11. The Governor in Council regrets to note that sickness and mortality increased during the year. The total number of deaths was 282 and the death rate was 12·91 per mille against 10·8 per mille in 1933. The daily average sick rate was 788·9 against 761·98 in 1933. The increase in deaths is chiefly under dysentery, and pneumonia and other respiratory diseases, and appears to point to the effects of overcrowding. On the other hand, variations do occur from year to year for which there is no adequate explanation. Thus in 1930 and 1932 when the jails were greatly overcrowded, the death rate per mille was respectively 9·3 and 10·52, while in 1929 when the jail population was several thousands less, the ratio per mille was 12·2. This is a matter, however, which the Inspector-General should continue to watch vigilantly.

12. For reasons which have already been explained the conditions in the jails were still abnormal, and credit is due to the jail staffs for the manner in which they have carried out their difficult tasks. His Excellency in Council has read with particular pleasure, the names of officers who have been mentioned in the report of the Inspector-General for their good work, and he also takes this opportunity to record his satisfaction with the manner in which Lt.-Col. R. E. Flowerdew, and Lt.-Col. M. A. Singh, respectively, administered the department during the year.

Order.—Ordered that a copy of this resolution be forwarded to the Inspector-General of Prisons, Bengal, for information and guidance.

Ordered that a copy of the report be submitted to the Government of India in the Home Department.

Ordered that a copy of this resolution be forwarded to the Judicial and Education Departments of this Government, for information.

Ordered also that the resolution be published in the Calcutta Gazette.

Resolution on the Annual Reports of the Civil Veterinary Department, Bengal, and of the Bengal Veterinary College for the year 1933-34.

GOVERNMENT OF BENGAL.

Department of Agriculture and Industries.

Veterinary.

CALCUTTA, THE 24TH JULY 1935.

RESOLUTION—No. 3658 VETY.

Minister-in-charge: The Hon'ble Nawab K. G. M. Farouqi, of Ratanpur.

Read—

Annual Reports of the Civil Veterinary Department, Bengal, and of the Bengal Veterinary College for the year 1933-34.

I—Civil Veterinary Department.

The year under review was a comparatively healthy one for the live-stock of the province, the mortality being less than that of the previous year.

2. The usual programme of preventive inoculation by the "Serum Alone" method for dealing with outbreaks of rinderpest was carried out with success, and 103,123 animals were protected by this method. But this method confers short immunity and is relatively costly. Experiments were carried out for finding out new and improved methods of prophylaxis having regard both to efficiency and practicability in the field. As a result the new "Goat Tissue Vaccine" method has been found to be very efficacious, while its cost is approximately 1/50th of that of the "Serum Alone Method." During the year 28,912 animals were protected by this new method.

3. A new dispensary was opened at Satkania during the year. The facilities for veterinary aid in the ordinary care of animals in the mufassal are still inadequate, but it is gratifying to note that interest is being taken by some local bodies for the construction and improvement of veterinary dispensaries.

4. His Excellency acting with the Minister in charge notes with pleasure the names of the officers of the department who did good work during the year and desires to acknowledge also the efficient way in which Mr. Kerr discharged his duties.

II—Bengal Veterinary College.

5. The College continued to attract a large number of candidates for admission from various parts of India and from outside it. There was also an increase in the number of entrants from Bengal. It is gratifying to note that the number of stipends awarded by the district boards in this province increased from 15 in 1932-33 to 20 in the year under review.

6. During the year a revised curriculum was introduced at the College which incorporated several new subjects to enable the veterinary graduates to keep abreast of the development of veterinary knowledge. The title of the College diploma was also changed from "Graduate of the Bengal Veterinary College" to "Graduate in Veterinary Science."

7. As usual the report of the Principal furnishes an interesting account of the activities in various branches of the College and hospital showing the usefulness of the institution as a centre for the spread of veterinary knowledge.

8. The Governor acting with the Minister in charge is pleased to notice the good work done by the Principal, Mr. MacGregor. The names of members of the College staff who have been commended for good work have also been noted. He is also pleased to acknowledge the services rendered by the non-official members of the Committee of Management.

Smoke abatement.

The Commission recognise that smoke abatement, to be successful, must have the co-operation of the owners. Within the last 25 years Smoke Ordinances have made efficient progress only by following the lines of Combustion Engineering whose object is to secure furnaces, etc., which fulfil the requirements of efficient combustion, and with which the owners can, with reasonable efforts, comply with smoke requirements and secure economic operation. In bygone days, when about half of the heat of the coal and often less was used for making steam, the balance being wasted in smoke and unburned gases, attempt to reduce the smoke under the Act was objected to as unreasonable and oppressive because reducing smoke meant using more coal. There was much in the owner's contention, as the combustion appliances in those days were crude and inefficient. But, in the present front line endeavour, with the achievements of Combustion Engineering in improving the boiler as a heat absorbing machine and the design of furnaces, etc., to improve combustion, 90 per cent. of the heat in coal is transferred to the steam, and there is no difficulty in complying with smoke abatement requirements, if the plant is correctly designed. Properly proportioned furnaces, flues and chimneys are basic factors of efficient smoke abatement, increasing the power of the plant and reducing the overhead and fuel expenses.

Under the Act new plants installed or alterations made to the old must be approved by the Commission. During the year the Commission examined and improved 66 plans of which 50 were made in the office of the Commission, covering nearly all types of industrial furnaces. Permission to construct was granted in each case.

Hints to owners and engineers.

Although the Commission acknowledge the assistance they have received from many owners they still find it necessary to point out how much further smoke nuisance could be abated if owners and engineers would make closer observations of the emission of smoke from chimneys under their control. Not only would this have immediate and appreciable results in reducing emission, but it would enable them to avoid too ready (and often unfounded) criticism of the accuracy of the observations made by the inspecting staff of smoke emission from their chimneys.

The inspecting staff make a practice of explaining to owners and engineers how easy it is for them by the exercise of reasonable care and attention to avoid black smoke emission. As no opportunities should be lost of pointing out that emission of black smoke only arises when there is neglect, the general purport of these instructions to owners and engineers is reproduced below.

Coal smoke nuisance is the result of the incomplete combustion of coal, that is to say, by reason of badly designed apparatus, carelessness in control of air, or improper stoking, the largest possible amount of fuel is not converted into heat, but instead much of it is allowed to pass up and out of the chimney, partly in a gaseous and partly in a solid, but finally divided state.

This can be avoided by refraining from charging too heavily and by firing little and often; three shovelful at a time is the maximum quantity which can be burnt properly. Care should be taken to keep a good fire on the grate according to the size of coal used; bare places allow air to enter, causing smoke and loss of steam by cooling.

The proper method is to spread the coal over the whole fire; charge down one side of one furnace only at a time, then fire one side of the other furnace, return to the other side of the first furnace and so on. This method keeps steam, avoids excessive cooling with straining plates, and maintains sufficient temperature to burn the smoke. It also saves coal, which means so much less for the stoker to shovel.

It is essential to open the air grids in the fire doors for a minute after firing. This admits the extra air necessary to burn the gases driven off each charge of coal.

Working an underloaded boiler with partially closed dampers is bound to be a dirty smoky process. It is better to reduce the fire area by covering the back of the grate with fire brick, so as to burn the reduced quantity of coal desired on a smaller bed with full draught.

Care should be taken not to allow all the fire to burn away before cleaning off; a good supply of red coal pushed to the right side of the furnace while the left is cleaned, then pushed back to the left side while the right is cleaned, makes a good starting fire, and lights up a new charge quickly, thereby saving steam and avoiding much smoke.

It is advisable to avoid cleaning off all furnaces at one time (this causes much loss of steam and subsequent forcing) but to wait until each fire has been worked up to its proper thickness and has burnt bright and ready to take the load, before cleaning the next.

If large quantities of coal are thrown on fires after cleaning, the result will be dense smoke and waste. It is better to keep on firing little and often until the fire is up to thickness.

Brickwork should on no account be neglected. Cracks in the side flues, defective setting round boiler fronts and badly fitting dampers quickly ruin the draught power of a boiler, by allowing air to rush in without resistance. No effort should be spared to ensure that air can only gain admittance through the fire grate where it has to overcome the resistance of the firebed. Cold air leakages cause reduced furnace efficiency by spoiling draught, cool the boiler and reduce chimney power by cooling the waste gases.

On receipt of telephone message Inspectors are always ready to assist with advice in cases where on account of mechanical breakdown or other causes it becomes temporarily impossible to prevent smoke.

Domestic smoke.

November heralds the entry of the cold weather in Calcutta. It is during this period that the nuisance caused by smoke from Calcutta's quarter of a million domestic and other kindred furnaces (without chimneys) becomes greater, on account of atmospheric conditions.

Discharged at ground level, this smoke especially in the cold weather evenings remains stationary and will not rise for hours.

The atmosphere becomes saturated with poisonous fumes, causing maximum damage to health. As already pointed out in previous reports the domestic smoke nuisance is beyond the control of the Commission, and before any legislation is feasible an extensive propaganda campaign seems needed. During the year the Commission with the help of the Public Health Department and the Ward Health Associations distributed posters to the public showing them that to stop smoke more draught was required when lighting the fires. The process is very simple, namely, to fan the fire when lit strongly for three or four minutes. No smoke will be in that case emitted. Those who can afford it should certainly instal electric or gas heating appliances and chimneys, and those who cannot should adopt the above simple method.

As the resources of the Commission are inadequate, they earnestly appeal to all public institutions interested in the health of the city to assist them in propaganda and demonstrations, and thereby help to reduce the number of deaths from respiratory diseases which are greater than the total from any other two single diseases during the cold season.

Complaints.

The Commission controls approximately an area of 80 square miles comprising the local limits of the Calcutta Corporation, Tollygunge Municipality, South Suburban Municipality, Garden Reach Municipality and Howrah Municipality. With the present inadequate staff it is difficult to keep in touch with all cases of smoke nuisance. The Commission has again been indebted to individual members of the public who have brought smoke nuisances to their notice by means of complaints. Seventy-six complaints were made against eighty-three in the last year. Whenever complaints are received immediate enquiries are made and relief given whenever possible. Many of the complaints were made against domestic smoke in respect of which no action can be taken under the Act; but every effort is made by instruction and advice to ameliorate conditions complained of.

Seven statutory warnings were served upon owners of factories for offensive smoke emission. With each intimations were also sent that, if effective remedial action to reduce emission were not taken, legal proceedings would be instituted.

Publicity.

The Commission was again represented at the Calcutta Health Welfare Week. Exhibits showed the evil effects of smoke nuisance and air pollution on the local respiratory mortality, the poisoning of food supplies and the effects on trees, buildings and distant localities. The Calcutta Electric Supply Corporation and the Oriental Gas Company, greatly assisted this section in displaying smokeless gas and electrical appliances for cooking and other domestic purposes, as a permanent solution of the evils of smoke. The public showed great interest in this section.

Permanent remedies.

Electricity, gas, gas coke oil and smokeless fuels (low temperature carbonisation).

In factories (apart from the 100 rice mills using the waste product, husk) much raw coal is used. The annual reduction shown in Appendix I indicates that it is possible to reduce smoke emission to a negligible amount, and in many cases it will prove economical to use a smokeless medium in place of raw coal.

The smoke abatement campaign has been materially assisted by the activities of the Calcutta Electric Supply Corporation who have during the past year further increased the number of their consumers, particularly amongst industrial works.

The number of domestic consumers of electricity has increased by 4,695 whilst an additional 540 heating and cooking circuits have been connected to the company's mains.

The total power of new electric motors connected during the past year in industrial works amounts to no less than 28,600 horse-power, and the greater proportion of this vast increase is represented by the conversion of existing steam engines to electric drives with a resultant closing down of boilers in existence for many years. This results in a corresponding diminution of free smoke emitted in the Calcutta area.

The Oriental Gas Company state that during the year ending 30th June 1934 there was distinct evidence of a turn towards the use of gas for industrial purposes in various ways.

At the same time, many new residential buildings were fitted with complete installations for cooking and water-heating purposes, whilst for the latter purpose the gas geyser demand has continued to be a marked feature of house and flat seekers. Property owners when renovating their premises frequently instal modern gas appliances.

During the year the number of appliances showed an increase of 762 for cooking, water-heating, steam raising and for a large variety of industrial purposes.

General control by the Commission.

During the year under review the Commission held 12 meetings. The Commission also kept in touch with various Smoke Departments, Fuel, Engineering and Research Institutes of Europe and America.

The average emission of smoke from each factory chimney was the equivalent of '07 minute of dense black smoke per hour. In 1906 when the work of the Commission commenced it stood at 13.1 minutes per hour.

Detecting offensive chimneys.

Smoke observations of big factories were generally made by the Inspectors from the Central Smoke Observatory which is fitted with a telephone so that owners may be informed on the telephone at the actual time of smoke emission. Observations of locomotives, steamers, launches and minor industries are made locally.

In 1926 the Commission recommended to Government that smoke observers should be appointed to relieve the Inspectors for the duty of inspection, etc., of engineering plants. Administrative approval was obtained in 1927 to this recommendation, but financial stringency has prevented this scheme being carried into effect.

During the year action was taken as under:—

Nuisances reported for—

Departmental action—1,216 offences.

Telephone warnings—980 offences.

Inspections and tests—4,575.

Statutory warnings—7.

Prosecutions - 12.

The maximum fine imposed for offences under the Act was Rs. 125 and the minimum Re. 1.

Conclusion.

The Commission records its grateful thanks to Smoke Departments, Fuel and Engineering Research Institutions and the technical and local press for assistance freely rendered. Thanks are also due to local owners, managers and engineers, whose co-operation and valuable assistance have greatly helped the Commission and to the technical staff for their energy and loyalty in carrying out the policy of the Commission.

CALCUTTA, THE 27TH JULY 1935.

RESOLUTION—No. 2176Misc.

Read

A report on the working of the Bengal Children Act, 1922, the Bengal Suppression of Immoral Traffic Act of 1933, the Reformatory Schools Act of 1897 and the Bengal Borstal Schools Act of 1928.

In publishing this annual report the Governor in Council desires to take the opportunity of expressing his great appreciation of the public service rendered by the various non-official bodies and voluntary associations mentioned in the report, and his recognition of the very valuable contribution which those associations have made to the work of rescue and reformation. He realises, however, that with the resources at their disposal they are unable to deal adequately with the vast problems which the Acts were designed to solve, and he trusts, therefore, that the work which those organisations have taken upon themselves in the interests of their less fortunate fellow citizens will receive such a measure of sympathy and support as will enable them not only to maintain, but also to extend their beneficent activities for the lasting good of the province.

Order: Ordered that copies of the resolution be forwarded to the Director of Public Instruction, Bengal, the Commissioner of Police, Calcutta, the Inspector-General of Police, Bengal, and the Inspector-General of Prisons, Bengal, for information.

Ordered also that the resolution, together with the report, be published in the Calcutta Gazette.

By order of the Governor in Council,

H. R. WILKINSON, :

Secy. to the Govt. of Bengal.

Report on the Administration of the Bengal Children Act, 1922, the Bengal Suppression of Immoral Traffic Act, 1933, the Bengal Borstal Schools Act, 1928, and the Reformatory Schools Act, 1897, for the year 1934.

The Bengal Children Act extends only to the town of Calcutta, the suburbs and the port of Calcutta, the municipality of Howrah, the police-stations of Bally, Jagacha, Sankrail and Domjur in the district of Howrah and the police-stations of Baranagar, Barrackpore, Tittagarh, Noapara, Khardah, Naihati and Jagatdal in the district of the 24-Parganas. The following sections of the Act have not yet been brought into force in any part of Bengal:—

Section 27(1), (i), (ii), (iii), (a), (b), (c), (d), (e) and (f).

Section 27(2), (a), (b), (c), (d) and (f).

Section 28(2).

The Bengal Suppression of Immoral Traffic Act, 1933, is in force in the town, suburbs and port of Calcutta.

The Reformatory Schools Act applies to that part of the province in which the Bengal Children Act is not in force.

Boy offenders dealt with by courts in the Children Act area are sent to the Reformatory and Industrial Schools at Alipore and those from outside this area to the Reformatory School at Hazaribagh in the province of Bihar and Orissa under the provisions of the Reformatory Schools Act, 1897.

2. During the year under report, 1,367 children were dealt with by the Central Juvenile Court, Calcutta. The great majority of these were sent up for offences under section 66 of the Calcutta Police Act, but 33 were prosecuted under the Bengal Children Act, 20 under the Bengal Suppression of Immoral Traffic Act and about 110 for theft and similar offences under the Indian Penal Code.

Sixty-five of these children were sent to a school or other place of custody, distributed as follows:—

Reformatory School, Alipore	36
Industrial School, Alipore	14
Gobinda Kumar Home, Panihati	5
Salvation Army Home, Entally	4
Society for the Protection of Children in India	6
Total	65

Others were fined or made over to their guardians, while most of those sent up under the Police Act were warned and discharged.

3. The Reformatory and Industrial Schools, Alipore, which are for boys only, are maintained by Government, while the Salvation Army Women's Industrial Home at Entally provides a Reformatory School for girls. The following have been notified as places of suitable custody under section 28(1) of the Bengal Children Act:—

- (a) The Gobinda Kumar Home, Panihati.
- (b) The Salvation Army Women's Industrial Home, Entally.
- (c) The Calcutta Protestant Home, commonly called the Fendall Home.
- (d) The Society for the Protection of Children in India.

4. Controlling agencies.—The Director of Public Instruction, Bengal, continued to be the Chief Inspector of Reformatory and Industrial Schools, with Mr. A. Macdonald and Mr. J. M. Sen as Assistant Inspectors. The Inspectress of Schools, Presidency and Burdwan Divisions, was Assistant Inspector of Reformatory and Industrial Schools for Girls.

The places of suitable custody recognised by Government as eligible for grants are inspected by two ladies appointed for the purpose.

5. Administration.—The following is a brief summary of the activities of the various institutions working under these Acts:—

(1) Reformatory and Industrial Schools, Alipore.—These schools, which have been established by Government under section 6(I) of the Bengal Children Act, are under the general administrative control of the Director of Public Instruction, Bengal, while their immediate management is vested in the Superintendent and a Managing Committee appointed by Government under section 7(I) of the Act.

The combined institutions have accommodation for 350 boys and the entire cost is met from Provincial revenues.

On 31st December 1934 the number of boys in the Reformatory School was 143 against 138 and 153 on the same date in 1933 and 1932, respectively, and in the Industrial School, the number was 68 against 60 in 1933 and 46 in 1932. The total number of boys in the two schools was thus 199 in 1932, 198 in 1933 and 211 in 1934.

The number of fresh admissions during 1934 was 56 in all—viz., 42 in the Reformatory and 14 in the Industrial School, of whom 49 had been convicted of theft.

One hundred and eleven of the boys in the two schools were Hindus, 90 Moslems, 7 Christians, 1 Jew and 2 Buddhists. The number of Bengali-speaking boys increased from 57 to 60 and of Urdu-speaking boys from 69 to 75, while the number of Hindi-speaking boys remained at 65 as in 1933. Only 62 belonged properly to Bengal, while the rest were natives of other provinces but were either domiciled in Bengal or had come there temporarily, mainly from Bihar and Orissa and the United Provinces.

Thirty-six boys including one released on appeal, were released from the Reformatory School and 4 from the Industrial School on the expiry of their terms. Of these 40, 21 were made over to their guardians on the date of their release and 19 boys, whose guardians were not traceable, were made over to the Bengal After-care Association. Four boys were licensed out. Five licenses which had previously been issued were revoked: in three of the cases this was due to the illness of the boys, the guardians being unwilling to take proper care of them during that period.

Three boys from the Reformatory School escaped but two were recaptured. The general discipline among the boys was good.

The boys are given primary education up to class V, the teaching being conducted in Bengali, Urdu and Hindi, and those of classes III, IV and V are also taught tin-smithy, blacksmithy, weaving, carpentry and tailoring. The examination results during the year show an improvement on those of previous years.

Every facility is given for moral and religious instruction and observance.

Visits to various places of interest were again arranged and the policy of allowing boys towards the end of their period of detention to spend one or two days at their homes was justified by the results.

The general health of the schools has shown a marked improvement since the introduction of the improved diet in 1932. Games are organized for the boys and physical exercises, including drill and gymnastics, are compulsory; a troop of Boy Scouts has been formed under a Scout Master and they acquitted themselves very creditably in various competitions.

The total expenditure on the schools in 1934 was Rs. 47,032 against Rs. 46,029 in 1933, and the average cost of maintaining and educating each pupil was Rs. 218-1 per annum against Rs. 231-14 in the previous year. This decrease is due mainly to the increase in the number of the boys.

(2) Gobinda Kumar Home, Panihati—This Home, which has accommodation for 95 girls, is intended for the reception of Indian girls dealt with under the Bengal Children Act and the Bengal Suppression of Immoral Traffic Act.

In 1934 there were 82 girls in the Home, varying from 3 to 17 years of age, as against 87 in 1933; 74 of them were Bengalis and all Hindus. There were 6 fresh admissions during the year and the number of girls in residence on 31st December 1934 was 75.

There is a primary school attached to the Home. The girls were, as usual, given lessons in needle-work, knitting, cane-work, weaving, nursing and cooking. Their handiwork was reported to be good and artistic.

The general health was good and the conduct of the girls satisfactory.

The cost of maintaining the Home was Rs. 13,405-10-11, of which Rs. 7,878-4-3 was met by a Government grant. The average cost of maintaining a girl was thus Rs. 13-8 a month as against Rs. 12-4 per mensem in the previous year. Of this Rs. 10 was contributed by Government in the shape of capitation grant and the balance was met from private sources.

(3) The Salvation Army Women's Industrial Home for Girls, Entally.—This Home also is intended for the reception of Indian girls dealt with under the Bengal Children Act and the Bengal Suppression of Immoral Traffic Act. It has accommodation for 70 girls and the total number of girls in residence during the year 1934 was 729.

Four girls from 10½ to 15½ years of age were sent to the Home by the court in 1934; 3 were Hindus and 1 Muhammadan, all belonging to the province of Bengal and all were rescued from houses of ill-fame. Two were dealt with under section 27 (2) (c) of the Bengal Children Act and the other two under section 14 of the Bengal Suppression of Immoral Traffic Act.

The educational progress of all the girls is stated to have been fair and their health was on the whole good.

The Home received from Government a maintenance grant of Rs. 1,200 in addition to Rs. 3,444-1 on account of capitation grants for the girls sent by the courts. The total expenditure of the Home during the year was Rs. 10,439-8-6 and the cost of maintaining each girl was Rs. 14-5-7 per mensem as against Rs. 14-8-3 in the previous year.

(4) The Calcutta Protestant Home (Fendall Home).—This Home is a Rescue Home for European and Anglo-Indian women and girls. The girls, who came to the Home during the year under review, were for the most part in need of protection from undesirable surroundings so that the work in 1934 was largely preventive. Others also needed a home, while they were looking for work. During the year 50 girls left the Home; 2 were married, 17 went into new situations as children's nurses or domestic helps, 20 returned to relatives and 11 were sent to boarding schools.

The girls do all the household work in the Home and are trained in various branches of needlework including dressmaking. They also carry out orders for tea sample bags, jharans and money bags, the girls being paid according to the amount and quality of their work. During the year under review the total amount realised on work done in the Home was approximately Rs. 3,000.

No girls dealt with under the Bengal Children Act or the Bengal Suppression of Immoral Traffic Act were sent to the Home during the year.

The Home received the usual maintenance grant of Rs. 960 from Government, and its income from subscriptions and donations amounted to more than Rs. 6,000.

(5) Society for the Protection of Children in India.—The Society dealt with 728 fresh cases in 1934 as against 606 in 1933 and 653 in 1932. Of these 158 were Indians, 115 British, 396 Anglo-Indians and 36 Jews.

The Society placed 67 of these children in schools or institutions, returned 21 to their guardians and themselves undertook the protection or guardianship of 97.

Satisfactory reports have been received of the progress of the girls and boys under the care of the Society and many of those who previously passed through their hands have established themselves in professions and other good employment.

Six children were sent to the Society by the court under the Bengal Children Act.

The Society received the usual maintenance grant of Rs. 1,600 from Government in addition to Rs. 1,939-2-8 as capitation grants.

The total amount disbursed by the Society during 1934 was about Rs. 30,700 against Rs. 30,000 last year.

(6) Hazaribagh Reformatory School.—Youthful boy offenders convicted in those districts to which the provisions of the Bengal Children Act have not been extended, were sent, as hitherto, to the Reformatory School at Hazaribagh in Bihar and Orissa.

During the year under report, 1 boy, who had been convicted in Bengal, was discharged under section 14 (a) of the Reformatory Schools Act of 1897.

(7) Bengal After-care Association for Juveniles and Adolescents.—One hundred and forty-five boys were admitted to the hostel in 1934 as against 248 in the previous year. Sixty-eight of them were received from the Alipore Central Jail, 21 from the Reformatory and Industrial Schools, Alipore, 50 from the Borstal School, Bankura, and 5 from Berhampore Jail.

The decrease in the number of admissions was due partly to the decrease in the number of boys coming from almost all the corrective institutions and partly to the fact that a large proportion of the boys released from the Alipore Reformatory and Industrial Schools were made over to their guardians direct.

The industrial class continued to be maintained in the hostel and boys were given instruction in tinsmithy, book-binding, carpentry, picture mounting, painting of boxes and signboards, biri making and net weaving. Twenty-five boys of the hostel were provided with suitable employment, mainly through the efforts of the Association staff.

Discipline in the hostel was, on the whole, satisfactory. Physical exercises and games were provided and the boys were taken on several excursions.

The Association received a maintenance grant of Rs. 2,400 from Government in 1934. It also received contributions from the Corporation of Calcutta and other private sources.

The total receipts of the Association during the year were Rs. 4,970-5-3 against an expenditure of Rs. 4,220-8-10.

Although there has been a steady progress in nearly all directions in the year under report, the lack of adequate financial resources and public interest continues to be the chief difficulty with which the Association has to contend.

The most useful work of the Association is undertaken by several District Associations which are affiliated and responsible to the Association. Several union boards and local bodies rendered valuable services in organising aftercare work in the districts.

Probation work.—In the year 1934, 259 children were placed on probation. Of these 139 were boys and 120 girls. The boys were principally charged with and convicted of theft and the girls were dealt with under section 27 (2) (c) of the Bengal Children Act and under the Immoral Traffic Act. Children convicted of theft are kept on probation for one year and those dealt with under section 27 (2) (c) of the Bengal Children Act and under the Immoral Traffic Act are on probation up to the ages of 16 and 18.

The probation work is supervised by the Children Court Magistrate.

There are two male Probation Officers, who had 67 and 72 boys respectively in their charge during the year under review: they visit them once a week. The Lady Probation Officer had 120 girls, whom she visits once a month. The Probation Officers look after the health, work and conduct of the children and act as their friend and guide in every way. Before a case is disposed of, the Probation Officer makes a thorough enquiry into the antecedents of the children and the suitability of the sureties and of their places of residence.

The 16 Honorary Lady Magistrates, who sit with the Stipendiary Magistrate in the Children's Court by turns, have been very regular in their attendance and have shown great interest in the work.

CALCUTTA, THE 30TH JULY 1935.

RESOLUTION—No. 3774AGRI.

Minister-in-charge: The Hon'ble Nawab K. G. M. Farouqi, of Ratanpur.

Read—

The Annual Report of the Department of Agriculture, Bengal, for the year 1933-34.

Administration.—Dr. G. P. Hector held charge of the department up to 20th September 1933, when he went on leave, and was succeeded by Mr. K. McLean, who held charge during the rest of the year. The post of Assistant Director of Agriculture was held by Mr. F. Smith up to 5th June 1933 during the absence on leave of Mr. McLean and by Mr. M. Carbery, Agricultural Chemist, in addition to his own duties from the 4th July 1933 to the 26th August 1933. On return from leave Mr. McLean held the post from the 27th August 1933 to the 20th September 1933, when he was appointed to officiate as Director of Agriculture, and was again succeeded in the post by Mr. Carbery, Agricultural Chemist, who held charge during the rest of the year. Mr. S. G. Sharangapani, Assistant Economic Botanist, continued to act as Economic Botanist throughout the year.

General.—While the season was on the whole a good one for winter and autumn crops and fair for rabi crops, economic conditions continued to be bad and the prices of rice and jute were low. Government were also compelled to reduce expenditure by the abolition of five posts of District Agricultural Officer.

The Report of the Bengal Jute Enquiry Committee was published in February 1934. Owing to the divergence of opinion among the members of the Committee on certain essential points Government addressed the Board of Economic Enquiry for advice on certain questions arising out of the report of the Committee. In the meantime more extensive propaganda than in previous years was undertaken in the rural areas through both official and non-official agencies in the hope of persuading cultivators to restrict sowings of jute, but the effect was not appreciable.

Research and experiment.—In this direction the assistance of the Imperial Council of Agricultural Research, coming at a time when the state of provincial revenues forbade expansion, was most valuable, and it was owing to the grants received from the Council that, in spite of the acute financial stringency, it was possible to carry on as many as seven important schemes of agricultural research during the year. These included two new schemes, one for fruit research work at Krishnagar, the other for investigation work into the costs of sugarcane cultivation. The importance of the former scheme lies in the prospect which it offers of increasing the cultivator's income, while the value of the latter scheme can hardly be exaggerated in view of the importance of the cultivation of sugarcane as a substitute for jute.

Work on agricultural research also continued at the Universities of Calcutta and Dacca with grants from the Imperial Council of Agricultural Research.

The practical results of previous researches were evident in various directions. Thus the increase in the area under sugarcane noticed in last year's resolution continued, and was further stimulated by a wide-spread distribution of cuttings under departmental supervision. Three new white sugar mills started work, and their prospects are good. A number of open-pan factories were working, but, generally speaking, they proved profitable only so long as the price of the cane did not rise above four annas a maund.

There was also an increase in the cultivation of tobacco, which was one of the few crops that did not suffer from depressed prices. The practice of growing tobacco for home consumption was increased by a large distribution of departmental seed, but in a large area the crop was unfortunately damaged by hail.

Cultivators throughout the jute districts were urged to grow larger quantities of groundnuts, and their sale appreciably increased.

Animal husbandry.—One of the most pressing questions before the department is the improvement of the cattle of the province. In most districts the local breeds give poor plough-cattle and poor milkers, and the best cattle are those imported from other provinces. While climatic conditions account for this in part there is reason to suppose that it may be possible to go some way towards ending this dependence on other provinces. It was found necessary during the year to close down the Rangpur farm as a measure of retrenchment, but good results were obtained from selected bulls distributed in the Malda, Rajshahi, Nadia and Hooghly districts and maintained under the supervision of special livestock officers. The results of entertaining this temporary staff have been very promising, and Government hope to extend the system as their finances allow. An essential part of the scheme is the increased cultivation of fodder crops, especially Napier grass.

Research into the problems of animal nutrition continued throughout the year.

Demonstration and propaganda.—Every effort was made to see that the unavoidable retrenchment of staff interfered as little as possible with educative activities. In the districts lantern lectures were given and improved crops demonstrated. The Publicity Department of Government introduced a publicity car with a loud speaker, and the agricultural officers in the districts through which it travelled attended and gave lectures and demonstrations. The practical value of the wireless talks on agriculture given by departmental officers in Calcutta was proved by the applications for seed and for information which they elicited. Exhibitions held at various local centres aroused keen interest, the cultivating classes in particular showing great appreciation of the lectures delivered and the improvements demonstrated.

Agricultural education.—The question of training further batches of teachers at the Secondary Agricultural School at Dacca in connection with the scheme for agricultural education in High English and Middle English Schools was not taken up pending examination of the position as regards the working of the agricultural classes in the schools already participating in the scheme. During the year under report there were fifty-six schools teaching agriculture, and 3,030 boys received instructions on the subject—both theoretical and practical.

The training of bhadralok youths in practical agriculture at the Faridpur farm with the object of settlement of char land with them in the district was continued. The 6th batch of students came under training on the farm, the 5th batch having already taken up work on the land.

Agricultural engineering.—The Agricultural Engineer was engaged mainly with the question of the improvement and erection of improved sugarcane milling machinery. Improved aerators and grainers, sugar disintegrators and centrifugals were designed by him for use in open-pan factories.

A demonstration factory for the manufacture of sugar on the open-pan system with up-to-date equipment was erected at Rajshahi and a similar factory was established at Malda by the Malda Co-operative Sugar Society.

Sericulture.—On the sericultural side a year of depression resulting from foreign, especially Japanese, competition was also marked by a very considerable curtailment of Government activity. Though they did not accept the Retrenchment Committee's proposals in full, Government were compelled by the state of their finances to reduce expenditure on the department, and consequently one post of Superintendent of Sericulture was abolished and the services of eighteen subordinate officers dispensed with. The nurseries at Tollygunge, Amriti, Kumarpur, Dacca and Surul were closed down, leaving seven nurseries only in the silk-producing districts.

Nevertheless work of value was performed. Study of the question of selecting indigenous nistari and chhotopolu continued. Attention was paid to increasing the outturn of mulberry leaf and at the same time lowering the cost of its production. The introduction of the tree mulberry as an auxiliary to the bush mulberry progressed. The cost of cultivation of a tree mulberry plantation is much less and the trees stand up better to drought than does the bush mulberry. Demonstration and propaganda continued in the districts of Malda and Murshidabad.

Acknowledgment.—Government in the Ministry of Agriculture have much pleasure in recording their appreciation of the valuable services rendered by Dr. Hector and Mr. McLean in the administration of the department. They have noted the names of other officers—superior and subordinate—commended in the report. The thanks of Government are also due to Professor P. C. Mahalanobis of the Indian Educational Service for his valuable help in advising on the lay-out of experiments and on the statistical examination of results, to the numerous officials and non-officials who helped the department in various ways, and to the members of the Provincial Agricultural Committee and other committees and boards attached to the department for the services rendered by them.

2. In sub-section (5) of section 1 of the Bengal Public Security Act, 1932, for the figures "1935" the figures "1940" shall be substituted.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

By section 1 (5) of the Bengal Public Security Act, 1932, the Act lapses on the 31st December, 1935. The Act was passed to confer special powers on the Local Government to enable it in case of emergency to combat activities subversive of law and order or prejudicial to the public security, for the suppression of which the ordinary powers of Government are inadequate. That such activities may recur, is by no means impossible and the Local Government is of opinion that it ought in common prudence not to allow the preventive powers conferred by the Act to lapse. It is therefore proposed to extend the period of the Act by a term of five years.

Provided that, if the Board is satisfied that the debtor or any creditor was for good and sufficient cause unable to comply with such notice, it may extend the period for the submission of his statement of debt.

(2) If any creditor fails to comply with a notice under sub-section (1), the Board, if so empowered under section 7, may pass an order in writing declaring that the amount of any debt due to him from the debtor on the date of such order shall, for the purposes of this Act, be deemed to be the amount stated in the statement of debt submitted by the debtor, and that no debt of which the creditor has failed to submit a statement, other than a debt which the debtor has included in his statement of debt shall be payable ;

and such order shall not be questioned in any Civil Court or in any manner :

Provided that an order made under this sub-section may be varied or reversed by the Board on an application for review or by the Appellate Officer on appeal if the creditor proves to the satisfaction of the Board or of the Appellate Officers as the case may be, that the creditor had no knowledge of the notice under sub-section (1) or that he has complied with it.

16. (1) Subject to rules made under this Act, a Board may exercise all such powers connected with the summoning and examining of parties and witnesses and with the production of documents as are conferred on a Civil Court by the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908. [Cf. C. P. Act II of 1933, s. 11; Pun. Act VII of 1934, s. 16.]

(2) Any person present may be required by a Board to furnish any information or to produce any document then and there in his possession or power. Act V of 1908.

Dismissal of applications.

17. (1) An application under section 9 may be dismissed by the Board, at any stage of its proceedings, in respect of all or any of the debts to which it relates,— [Cf. C. P. Act II of 1933, s. 14; Pun. Act VII of 1934, s. 18.]

(a) if, for reasons to be stated in writing, the Board does not consider it desirable or practicable to effect a settlement of debts, or

(b) if, in the opinion of the Board, the applicant fails to pursue his application with due diligence :

Provided that, when such applicant is a creditor, the Board, instead of dismissing such application, may substitute the debtor or any other creditor, who shall thereafter be deemed to be the applicant for the purposes of this Act.

(2) The Board shall dismiss an application under section 9 if it includes a claim which, in the opinion of the Board, is collusive and intended to defraud any creditor.

Determination of amounts of debt.

18. (1) If the debtor and a creditor are unable to agree as to the existence or amount of any debt, the Board shall decide whether the debt exists and determine its amount :

Provided that a decree of a Civil Court relating to a debt shall be conclusive evidence as to the existence and amount of the debt.

(2) Before passing any order under section 19, 20, or 21 the Board, after considering the statements of debt submitted under section 11 and sub-section (1) of section 13, shall, in accordance with rules made under this Act, determine in respect of each debt the amount of the principal and the amount of the arrears of interest due thereon up to the date of such determination.

(3) In determining the original principal of a debt for the purposes of proviso (ii) to clause (b) of sub-section (1) of section 19, the Board shall determine the amount of the original loan, after excluding any amount of interest on such loan which may at any time have been included as principal; and the difference between the original principal and the amount of the debt shall be deemed to be the arrears of interest due thereon :

Provided that where there is no independent proof of the amount of the original principal of the debt and the debtor and creditor are unable to agree as to such amount, the amount shown as the principal in the bond, if any, relating to the debt shall be determined to be the original principal, unless the recital in the bond indicates that the principal mentioned in the bond includes any arrears of interest.

(4) When the Board has determined under this section the amounts of the principal of a debt and of the arrears of interest due thereon, the decision of the Board in this respect shall not be questioned in any Civil Court or in any manner other than that provided in this Act.

The Bengal Relief of Indebtedness Bill, 1935.

(Clauses 19, 20.)

Settlement of debts.

19. (1) Subject to rules made under this Act—

- (a) when any creditor agrees in respect of any debt owing to him to an amicable settlement with the debtor, the Board shall embody such settlement in writing and may dismiss the application in respect of the remaining debts of the debtor; or
- (b) when creditors to whom not less than forty per cent. of the total debt is owing agree to an amicable settlement with the debtor, the Board, if it is so empowered under section 7 and if it considers that an offer made by the debtor for the settlement of any debt not included in the amicable settlement is a fair offer which the creditor concerned ought reasonably to accept, may pass an order that the debt to which the offer relates shall be settled in accordance with such offer, and may dismiss the application in respect of the remaining debts;

Provided that for the purpose of this clause an offer shall not be considered by the Board to be a fair offer—

- (i) if its terms are less favourable than the terms of the amicable settlement relating to a debt of the same description, or
- (ii) if it contemplates the reduction of any debt to an amount which is less than the original principal of the debt as determined under sub-section (3) of section 18; or

- (c) when creditors to whom not less than sixty per cent. of the total debt is owing agree to an amicable settlement with the debtor, the Board, if it is so empowered under section 7, may pass such order as it thinks fit regarding the terms on which the remaining debts of the debtor shall be settled:

Provided that such terms shall not be less favourable than the terms embodied in the amicable settlement under this clause for a debt of the same description.

(2) Notwithstanding anything contained in sub-section (1), the amount of the principal of any debt due in respect of arrears of rent or under section 171 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, 1885, shall not be reduced under clause (b) or clause (c) of sub-section (1) except by an amicable settlement. VIII of 1935.

(3) The terms of any settlement of debts under sub-section (1) shall be embodied in an award to be made by the Board in this behalf.

Grant of certificate in respect of certain debts

20. Subject to any rules made under this Act, if any creditor does not accept an offer made by the debtor which in the opinion of the Board is fair and such as the creditor ought reasonably to accept, the Board if it is so empowered under section 7, instead of passing any other order which it is competent to pass, may grant to the debtor a certificate in the prescribed form in respect of the debt to which the offer relates, and thereafter, notwithstanding the provisions of any law for the time being in force, no Civil Court shall allow to the plaintiff, in any suit for the recovery of such debt, any costs in such suit or any interest on the debt after the date of such certificate in excess of simple interest at the rate of six per cent. per annum on the amount due on the date of such certificate, and no decree for the recovery of such debt shall be executed until all amounts payable in respect of

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

The problem of rural indebtedness with which this Bill deals has for many years been the subject of anxious consideration on the part of various Provincial Governments: but it has been brought into fresh prominence and has become a matter of immediate urgency in Bengal since the year 1929 when a sudden fall in the prices of agricultural produce resulted from the worldwide depression in trade. The agriculturists of Bengal, particularly those of its most fertile and previously most thriving districts, have become involved in debt far beyond their power to repay and unless a remedy is provided the consequences may be disastrous to the province. The Board of Economic Enquiry which was appointed in December, 1933, submitted in its report of 26th November, 1934, recommendations for legislation, which they expected would be of benefit to creditors in no less degree than to debtors. These recommendations were based on the provisions of the Central Provinces Debt Conciliation Act, 1933, and the Punjab Relief of Indebtedness Act, 1934: but whereas these two Acts aim primarily at settlement of debts by agreement between debtor and creditor, the Board of Economic Enquiry proposed that powers be granted for settlement by compulsion in certain cases. Meanwhile, successful experiments had been made in Chandpur subdivision of Tippera district by way of inducing creditors to compromise with their debtors, and it appeared probable that much could be done elsewhere in Bengal on similar lines. Provision has therefore been made in the Bill for setting up Debt Settlement Boards of different types as circumstances demand. The first type would resemble those which have shown such promise in Chandpur subdivision: the second would exercise powers like the Boards established in the Central Provinces though somewhat wider: and the third might be granted powers to exercise compulsion in varying degrees on creditors who unreasonably refuse to settle debts amicably. The powers proposed are those suggested by the Board of Economic Enquiry, with various safeguards against their misuse. In addition, the Bill includes provision, as suggested by the Board of Economic Enquiry, for a simple insolvency procedure, the need of which was emphasized in paragraph 367 of the Report of the Royal Commission on Agriculture in 1928.

DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE, BENGAL.

Dacca, the 12th August 1935.

First Forecast of the Sugarcane Crop of Bengal, 1935-36.

(Note.—On an average of the five years ending 1933-34, the area under sugarcane in Bengal has represented some 7·2 per cent. of the total area under sugarcane in British India.)

Character of the season.—At the outset the weather was favourable for planting in East and North Bengal while elsewhere it was unfavourable for shortage of rain. Drought in March and April somewhat interfered with the germination and growth in some districts. Later on alternate rain and sunshine helped the growth and development generally. The present condition is reported to be satisfactory, on the whole.

Area planted.—The total area planted with sugarcane for the province is reported to be 324,700 acres this year as against 274,900 and 276,200 acres reported in the corresponding and final forecasts of last year. The large increase in area is mainly attributed to the increased demand and to intensive propaganda to restrict jute cultivation.

Dacca, the 12th August 1935.

Monthly Weather and Crop Report of Bengal for July 1935.

I. Character of the season.—During the month under review, the rain was in excess of the normal in two districts while in the rest of the Presidency it was below the average. The usual rainfall statement is appended.

II. Progress of agricultural operations.—Transplantation of winter paddy seedlings commenced but the progress of the operation was slow for want of rain. Harvesting of autumn rice was progressing briskly and that of jute proceeded slowly for want of sufficient rain for steeping.

III. State of standing crops.—The condition of standing crops was reported to be generally fair.

IV. Prospects and probable outturn.—The outturn of summer til was estimated at 81 per cent. of the normal. A satisfactory crop of autumn rice is expected.

V. Damage to standing crops.—Some damage was caused to jute by insects in places in West Bengal.

VI. Condition of agricultural stock.—The condition of live-stock was, on the whole, fair. Sporadic cases of cattle-disease were, however, reported from fifteen districts of the Presidency and from the states of Cooch-Bihar and Tripura.

VII. Failure of pasturage and fodder.—Insufficiency of fodder was reported from parts of Murshidabad.

VIII. Prices of food-grains.—During the second fortnight of the month the retail prices of common rice of the cheapest quality rose in eight districts, fell in six and remained stationary in the rest of the Presidency. The prices ranged from 10 seers per rupee at Murshidabad and Darjeeling to 13½ seers per rupee at Dinajpur.

IX. The condition of agricultural population.—The condition of agricultural population was, on the whole, fair, except in parts of Murshidabad, Birbhum and Bankura, where distress continues.

Resolution on the Report on the Police Administration in the town of Calcutta and its suburbs for the year 1934.

GOVERNMENT OF BENGAL.

Police Department.

CALCUTTA, THE 17TH AUGUST 1935.

RESOLUTION—No. 4243Pl.

Read—

The Report on the Police Administration in the town of Calcutta and its suburbs for the year 1934.

The office of the Commissioner of Police was held throughout the year by Mr. L. H. Colson, C.I.E., I.P.

2. The strength of the force at the close of the year was 5,646 officers and men. The gross expenditure incurred was Rs. 45,01,311, but if receipts amounting to Rs. 9,03,774 be deducted, the net cost of the maintenance of the force was approximately Rs. 36 lakhs. The Calcutta Police District has a population of 1,196,734, so that the cost per head of the population is about Rs. 3.

The number of constables enlisted in the year was 117 as against 89 in the previous year. Of these, 51 were Bengalees as against 40 in the previous year. It is a matter for satisfaction that recruits with a sound educational qualification continue to present themselves for enlistment.

His Excellency in Council regrets to note an appreciable increase in the number of punishments, specially of major punishments, and trusts this increase may prove to be only temporary.

3. The general health of the force continued good, the number of cases of malarial fever being considerably lower than in previous years. There were, however, 44 deaths against 32 in 1933. The average daily number of sick was 104 against 103 in the previous year. The effect of housing conditions on the health of the force is a subject which requires investigation. His Excellency in Council is pleased to note the improvement which has been effected in the police hospital both in respect of facilities for nursing and in equipment.

4. Crime Statistics.—There was a slight increase in the total number of cognizable cases reported to the police, but it is noteworthy that there was a welcome drop in all forms of serious crimes. The number of true cases of coining, robbery, murder, dacoity, rioting, burglary and receiving stolen property decreased being 40, 16, 21, 4, 21, 426, and 93 respectively against 56, 19, 28, 7, 36, 432 and 148 in the previous year. There has been, moreover a remarkable improvement in the percentage of property recovered to property stolen, the figure being 26·2 in 1934 against 11·9 in 1932 and 19·3 in 1933. Of the cases reported to the police, 94·6 per cent. were sent up. Of the cases tried, 97·3 per cent. ended in conviction.

The Detective Department assisted the thana police in 223 cases and investigated 147 cases independently, although it was under strength by two inspectors and three sub-inspectors who were employed in the Press and general intelligence section. His Excellency in Council has read with interest the account of the more important cases dealt with by the Detective Department and is impressed with the high standard of detective ability displayed by the investigating staff.

His Excellency in Council is also pleased to note the valuable work done by the Special Detective staff of the Port Police which resulted in the recovery of 14 revolvers, 3 automatic pistols and 234 rounds of cartridges, the arrest of a number of terrorists in possession of fire-arms and the externment of 22 arms smugglers and brokers from Calcutta under the Bengal Smuggling of Arms Act, 1934.

5. Revolutionary crime.—Although there were no cases of overt terrorist crime, the discovery of arms, explosives and ammunition of various types is a reminder that terrorism is still active and malignant, and it is a tribute to the vigilance of the Special Branch working in co-operation with the Intelligence Branch of the Bengal Police that the movement has been kept so well in check.

The most satisfactory result of the year was the success achieved against the dangerous group of terrorists known as the Bengal Volunteer Corps of the Sree Sangha which has been responsible for many outrages. His Excellency in Council has much pleasure in recognising the loyalty, courage and devotion to duty displayed by all ranks of the force throughout the year, and particularly of the Special Branch, which has so effectively strengthened the position of Government against the deep-rooted menace of terrorism.

6. Labour.—His Excellency in Council has noted with regret the increase in communistic agitation and propaganda amongst the working classes of the city. This disquieting feature in the labour situation of Calcutta seriously interferes with the legitimate activities of genuine trade unions, which alone can promote the welfare of the labouring classes and which His Excellency in Council is anxious to foster and encourage.

7. Beggars.—There was a striking increase in the number of beggars sent up for trial, there being 8,235 against 4,334 in the previous year. The procedure under the present law for dealing with this problem is far from satisfactory. Action absorbing much police time and public money not infrequently results merely in the discharge of the accused after a warning or a sentence of detention till the rising of the Court. Government would welcome suggestions from those who are interested in this subject, with a view to finding a practicable solution of what has become a pressing problem.

8. Traffic.—The setting up of the Traffic Advisory Board composed of persons interested in the traffic problems of the city was a welcome innovation introduced during the year. It is only with the co-operation of the public that the safety of the streets can be secured, and the new Board forms a valuable link with the police which should do much towards that end.

There was a decline in the number of fatal injuries due to street accidents. The number of persons killed was 99 against 118 in 1933. The number of injured, on the other hand, was 2,195 against 1,879 in 1933.

The report of the Public Vehicles Department shows an all-round increase in receipts from the various sources, the amount realised from the motor vehicles tax alone being Rs. 10,84,636, which is Rs. 1,18,269 better than in the previous year.

9. Commendation of officers.—His Excellency in Council has been pleased to read the tributes paid by the Commissioner of Police to his Deputy Commissioners, Assistant Commissioners and other subordinate officers and desires to take this opportunity of placing on record his appreciation of the services rendered by all ranks of the force. Thanks are due to Mr. Colson for maintaining a high standard of discipline and efficiency.

Order.—Ordered that a copy of this resolution be forwarded to the Commissioner of Police, Calcutta, the Chief Presidency Magistrate, Calcutta, and the Commissioner of the Presidency Division for information.

Ordered also that a copy of the report be submitted to the Government of India in the Home Department.

Ordered also that the resolution be published in the Calcutta Gazette.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

Since the Court of Wards was originally constituted under Regulation V of 1799, there have been no less than 16 amending Acts of which the latest was in 1915. Owing to the economic depression which has now continued for 4 or 5 years, collections in all the estates have fallen below the normal. The surpluses which were counted on when the estates were taken under the charge of the Court of Wards have not materialised and it has been impossible to pay the interest on the debts of many estates regularly. In some cases the creditors have not been able or willing to make due allowance for the difficulties of the times and they have threatened to disorganise the work of the Court of Wards and to frustrate the objects for which the Court of Wards was established by bringing civil suits to sell up the different properties of the wards and to attach the working balances of the estates in the Collectors' treasuries and banks. Section 10C of the Act as it now stands provides for stay of execution proceedings, but it operates for one year only and experience has amply proved that this period is not long enough in the case of an encumbered estate to make arrangements for the payment of its debts. The main object of the amendments is to strengthen the hands of the Court against unsecured creditors and to give the Court of Wards better facilities for guarding the true interests not only of the wards themselves, but also of all the creditors as opposed to those few creditors who take action in the Civil Courts.

The benefit of the Court of Wards Act was originally intended for lunatics, minors and women, but since 1892 the protection of the Court has also been extended to adult proprietors who for various reasons have declared themselves disqualified. Some of the defects which it is proposed to remedy are due to this development. Originally also it was contemplated that only estates or *zemindari*s would come under the Court of Wards, but the properties of some wards consist mainly of patnis and other subordinate tenures. The amendment of section 23 provides that all such properties can be attached after release not only if revenue is in arrears but for any other dues of Government including loans granted by Government, and rent to superior landlords.

As the result of the amending Act of 1906 in Western Bengal and of the amending Act of 1907 in Eastern Bengal, many important sections of the Act contain important differences. For example, section 10A(5) of Eastern Bengal says that claims not submitted to the Court shall be deemed to be discharged for all purposes. Section 10A of Western Bengal says that such debts shall cease to carry interest. It is proposed to apply the Western Bengal section to the whole province and also to reconcile many other discrepancies.

SUPPLEMENT.

Official Papers.

DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE, BENGAL.

Dacca, the 5th August 1935.

First Forecast of the Cotton Crops of Bengal, 1935-36.

(Note.—On an average of the five years ending 1933-34, the area under the cotton crops in Bengal has represented some 0·2 per cent. of the total area under cotton in India.)

There are two crops, early and late. The “early” crop is chiefly grown in the Chittagong Hill Tracts and in the Tripura State and to a small extent in other districts. The “late” crop is grown in Bunkura and Midnapore. As the late crop has not yet been sown, this forecast deals only with the early crop.

Character of the season.—The weather was generally favourable for sowing and early period of growing. The present outlook is reported to be fair, on the whole.

Area sown.—The area sown is reported to be 72,785 acres this year as against 72,903 acres in the corresponding forecast of last year. The decrease in area in the Tripura State is due to the fall in the price of cotton.
